

Contents

1	The Graeco-Roman World	1
1.1	Homer and Hesiod	2
1.2	The Ionic School	3
1.3	Pythagoras and the Pythagorean School	7
1.4	The Succeeding Schools, the Atomists, Plato	9
1.5	Aristotle	11
1.6	Pytheas' Travels and Early Greek Geography	17
1.7	Eratosthenes' Measurement of the Earth	20
1.8	Graeco-Roman Civilization and the Decline of Science	26
1.8.1	Strabo of Amasia (Pontus)	29
1.8.2	Ptolemy's Geography	31
1.8.3	Pomponius Mela and Roman Cosmography	38
	Suggested Readings	40
2	The Roman World from the End of the Republic to the End of the Empire	41
2.1	The Age of Augustus	41
2.2	From Augustus to the Age of Diocletian	47
2.3	Late Antiquity. The Decline of the Roman Empire	58
2.3.1	Lactantius	59
2.3.2	St. Ambrose	63
2.3.3	St. Augustine	65
2.3.4	The Last Latin Encyclopedists of the Roman Empire	68
	Suggested Readings	74
3	The Middle Ages	75
3.1	Boethius: The End of the Latin World and the Beginning of the Middle Ages	76
3.2	The Christians Encyclopedists of the Early Middle Ages	78

3.2.1	Isidore of Seville	78
3.2.2	Bede the Venerable	82
3.3	The Early Scholastics	85
3.4	The Problem of the Supercelestial Waters in the Scholastics of the Twelfth Century	90
3.4.1	Abelard	91
3.4.2	The School of Chartres	92
3.4.3	Alexander Neckam	98
3.5	On the Shoulders of Giants. The Thirteenth Century and the Aristotelian Cosmos	100
3.5.1	Johannes de Sacrobosco (John of Holywood)	101
3.5.2	Robert Grosseteste	104
3.5.3	Bartholomew the Englishman (Bartholomaeus Anglicus)	107
3.5.4	Albert the Great and Roger Bacon	110
3.5.5	Dante and the Questio de Aqua et Terra	111
3.6	The Fourteenth Century and the New Interpretations of Aristotle's Theory of the Natural World	114
3.6.1	Jean Buridan	115
	Suggested Readings	121
4	From the Age of the Great Transoceanic Discoveries to the New Measurements of the Earth	123
4.1	The Translation of Ptolemy's Geography and the Books that Columbus Annotated	124
4.2	Jean Fernel and the New Measure of the Degree of the Terrestrial Meridian	132
4.3	Nicolaus Copernicus and Christopher Clavius	135
4.4	Willebrord Snell and the First Triangulation	143
4.5	Jean Picard and the Beginning of the French Triangulations	147
4.6	Conclusion	151
	Suggested Readings	151
5	The Shape and the Size of the Earth in the Eighteenth Century	153
5.1	The Observations of Richer at Cayenne and Their Consequences	153
5.2	Newton's and Huygens' Theories of the Earth's Shape	156
5.3	The Peru and Lapland Expeditions	161
5.4	Clairaut's " Figure de La Terre "	163
5.5	The Metre	167
	Suggested Readings	171

6 From the French Revolution to the Artificial Satellites	173
6.1 Towards the Geoid	173
6.2 The Geoid and the End of Our Journey	178
Suggested Readings	183
Epilogue. Impressions of a Journey	185
Author Index	189