

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	page 15
I THE ORIGINS OF THE PERMANENT CIVIL SERVICE, 1780-1830	21
The eighteenth-century 'civil service' neither civil, nor a service. 'Permanence' and changes of government. Why no spoils system? Administration becomes autonomous. The origin of the permanent secretaries. Constitutional bureaucracy.
II THE DECLINE OF PATRONAGE	50
Kinsmen and other dependants. Political patronage. Patronage and promotion. Patronage and party loyalty. Effects on civil-service morale. Patronage in the political system.
III MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY: THE NINETEENTH-CENTURY REFORMULATION	80
Ministries and boards. Boards in decline. Ministers and their officials. The doctrine of anonymity.
IV MINISTERS IN THEIR DEPARTMENTS	106
The hierarchy of decision-making. Advising the minister. The qualities of a minister. The junior ministers. The grey eminence myth.
V THE PERMANENT OFFICIALS	134
Patricians and plebeians. Professionals and zealots. Forerunners of the Administration Class. Civil servants in the Honours List. Social status and organizational behaviour. The career problem: administration or politics? The qualities of a civil servant. The emergence of the generalist.
VI LAW AND ADMINISTRATION	160
Governmental responsibility for legislation. Drafting government Bills. The 'Mikado' effect. Feed-back from administration to legislation.
VII THE MINISTER'S POWERS	185
Appeal to the courts. Origins of modern administrative law. Delegation of powers and subordinate legislation.

CONTENTS

Quasi-legislation. Administrative tribunals. Inspection and exchequer grants.
VIII SOME DEPARTMENTS AND TREASURY CONTROL The emigration officers. Vaccination and medical research. The Home Office and the provincial police. The Alkali Acts. Treasury control.	213
IX THE NINETEENTH-CENTURY REVOLUTION IN GOVERNMENT The Dicey model. The MacDonagh model. Laissez-faire and state intervention. Laissez-faire in classical economics. Imperfect competition and monopoly. Government sponsorship of research. Towards a mixed economy.	258
X OUR PRESENT DISCONTENTS Trevelyan, Northcote and Fulton. The 'all-rounders'. The erosion of anonymity. Ministerial responsibility today. Individual and collective responsibility. The accountability of administration to society. 'Hiving-off.' Devolution to regional authorities. Public law and the Parliamentary Commissioner. Representative bureaucracy.	284
BIBLIOGRAPHY	317
INDEX	321