

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Abbreviations	ix
Introduction: A Great Indelicacy	1
Aims and Objectives	2
‘Insular and Pragmatical Minds’: Barthes’s First Readers in English	4
Barthes and the Poets	9
Chapter One: Barthes and Forrest-Thomson	13
‘S/Z’	17
‘Drinks with a Mythologue’	20
‘L’effet du réel’	24
Poems with Footnotes	26
‘After Intelligibility’	34
Poetic Artifice	40
Conclusion	48
Chapter Two: Barthes in America	50
Robert Duncan’s ‘Kopóltuś’	50
Ron Silliman’s Nine Poets	52
Bernadette Mayer’s Experiments	75
Lyn Hejinian’s Erotics of Materials	80
Conclusion	91
Chapter Three: Barthes in Journals	92
Approaching Poetry Journal Culture	92
Poetics and Art Journalism: New York and Paris	93

Barthes in the 'Language-Centred' Poetics Journals	99
Web Way	101
Michael Palmer's Barthes	103
L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E 's Barthes	106
'Code Words'	109
Open Letter	115
Barthes in Poetics Journal	116
UK Poetics	124
Barthes and Oulipo	126
Conclusion	129
Chapter Four: Barthes and Love	130
Reading A Lover's Discourse	130
'Lonely Girl Phenomenology'	132
Anne Carson: Nuance and Eros	135
Deborah Levy: The Suburbs of Hell	140
Kristjana Gunnars: Roland Barthes in Winnipeg	147
Gunnars's Transition: Longing to Zero	155
Conclusion	157
Chapter Five: Rejections of Barthes	159
Rejection and/as Influence	159
The Signifier as Fetish	161
Barthes and Race	166
John Yau and 'The Death of the Author'	168
Queer Barthes	171
New Narrative Writing and Queer Subjecthood	173
Acker, Barthes, Bataille	183
Conclusion	190
Conclusion: Nothing Better than a Theory	193
Bibliography	198
Index	217