

Contents

List of Figures	vii
BARBARA MCCLOSKEY
Introduction: What Can Art Do?	i
PART I Artistic Responses to World War I
ROBERT C. KUNATH
1 World War I, German Art, and Cultural Trauma: The Birth of the “Degenerate Art” Exhibition from the “Spirit of 1914”	17
DEBORAH ASCHER BARNSTONE
2 Max Liebermann’s Kriegszeit Lithographs: Pro-war or Anti-war?	43
NINA LÜBBREN
3 Women, War, and Naked Men: German Women Sculptors and the Male Nude, 1915–1925	73
JAMES A. VAN DYKE
4 Dix Petrified	103
PART II World War II and Holocaust Memory
KATRIN DETTMER
5 “All of a sudden, there was this split”: Heiner Müller’s Poetics of Trauma	131

JUSTIN COURT

- 6 Heimrad Bäcker: Photography at the Limits of Understanding the Holocaust and its Violence 159

DAVID KENOSIAN

- 7 Aftershocks: (Missing) Holocaust Photographs and Writing the Past in Uwe Johnson's Jahrestage and W. G. Sebald's "Max Ferber" 187

- PART III Reverberations of the Traumatic Past in Recent German Visual Culture 211

ANNETTE VOWINCKEL

- 8 Horst Faas, Thomas Billhardt, and the Visual Vietnam War in the Two Germanys 213

ANDREA GYORODY

- 9 This Sum of Catastrophes: Excavating the History of Joseph Beuys's 7000 Oaks 239

SVEA BRAEUNERT

- 10 Deferring Perspective in Times of Urgency: Louise Lawler Looks at Gerhard Richter's Painting of the Air War 271

- Notes on Contributors 297

- Index 301