

MALARIA AND VICTORIAN FICTIONS OF EMPIRE

JESSICA HOWELL

Texas A&M University

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures	page vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	I
1 Nationalism and Acute Malaria in Transatlantic Fiction: Charles Dickens and Henry James	29
2 Malaria and the Imperial Romance: H. Rider Haggard's King Solomon's Mines	70
3 Malarial Feminisms: Olive Schreiner and the Allegories of Chronic Disease	102
4 The Boy Doctor of Empire: Malaria and Mobility in Rudyard Kipling's Kim	137
5 Rewriting the Bite: The Calcutta Chromosome , Mosquitoes, and Global Health Politics	166
Coda: Toward a Postcolonial Health Humanities	196
Bibliography	201
Index	221