

CONTENTS

| | |
|--|------------|
| Introduction: Ways of Reading a Meal | 1 |
| ‘Our Little Bastard World’: Food, History, and Identity in the Novels of V.S. Naipaul | 39 |
| ‘It Was Actually Wonderful to See What Fertile Ground the Dining Table Was for Discussion and Debate’: Food, Gender, and Culture in the Novels of Anita Desai | 105 |
| Stereotypes, Family Values, and Chop Suey: Food, Authority, and Authenticity in the Novels of Timothy Mo | 151 |
| The Chutnification of History and the Limits of Gastronomic Pluralism: Food, Identity, and the Commodification of Culture in the Novels of Salman Rushdie | 207 |
| Conclusion | 263 |
| Bibliography | 277 |
| Index | 321 |