

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

PART ONE	Every Language Draws a Circle ...	1
	1. Recognizing the Contingency of One's Own Language	3
	2. Naming the World or Construing the World?	12
	3. The Givens of Human Life	19
	4. Universal Words, Semantic Atoms and Semantic Molecules	31
	5. Human Bodies and Human Minds: What Is Visible and What Is Invisible	40
PART TWO	Emotions and Values	53
	6. Anglo Values vs. Human Values: Talking about Values In a Global World	55
	7. Human Emotions and English Words: Are Anger and Disgust Universal?	68
PART THREE	"Polliteness" and "Cooperation"	87
	8. Talking to Other People: "Polliteness" and Cultural Scripts	89
	9. Doing Things with Other People: "Cooperation," "Interaction" and "Obscenie"	101
PART FOUR	Entering Other Minds	117
	10. Grammar and Social Cognition: The Hawaiians, the Dalabons, and the Anglos	119
	11. Thinking about "Things" In Yucatec and in English	129
	12. Endangered Languages, Endangered Meanings	137
	13. Chimpanzees and the Evolution of Human Cognition	156
PART FIVE	Breaking Down the Walls of the Prison	183
	14. From Ordinary (Anglo) English to Minimal English	185

PART SIX Kindred Thinking Across Disciplines 197

Preliminary Remarks 197

15. Anthropology, Psychology, Psychiatry 199

16. Philosophy, Theology, Politics 215

17. Linguistics: Cognitive and Cultural Approaches 224

18. Bilingualism, Life Writing, Translation 233

Final Remarks 243

Notes 249

References 253

Index 275