

Table of Contents

0. The Reference and the Study of Literature	7
1. Poetics	15
1.1. The acceptations of the term and the object of the discipline	15
1.2. Poetics in antiquity	18
1.2.1. Plato and the objection to poetry	18
1.2.2. Aristotle, the father of poetics	21
1.2.3. The poetics of the Latin space. Epistle to the Pisos	26
1.2.4. The poetics of the Latin world. The treatise On the Sublime	30
1.3. The survival of poetics during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance	34
1.4. Between mimesis and poiesis . The 18 th century	37
1.5. Poetics in the age of Romanticism	42
1.5.1. Wordsworth and Coleridge, the precursors of the poetics of Modernity	44
1.6. Modern Poetics	47
1.6.1. Russian Formalism	49
1.6.2. New Criticism	54
1.6.3. The Prague Linguistic Circle (1926–1948)	58
1.6.4. Roman Jakobson	62
1.6.5. Structuralism	65
1.6.6. Semiotics	69
1.6.7. The mathematical poetics	76
1.7. Conclusions	79
2. Rhetoric	83
2.1. The glory and oblivion of a millenary discipline	83
2.2. Rhetoric in Antiquity	86
2.2.1. Greek rhetoric	87
2.2.2. Latin rhetoric	91
2.2.3. Asianism	95
2.3. Another type of rhetoric: sacred rhetoric	96
2.3.1. Sacred rhetoric in Romanian culture	98

2.4. Rhetoric in the centuries which were not favorable to it	98
2.5. The rhetorical system and some essential matters related to rhetoric	102
2.6. The specificity of rhetoric and its reference	107
2.7. Modern rhetoric and its two directions	108
2.7.1. The philosophic neorhetoric	109
2.7.2. Linguistic neorhetoric	112
2.8. Conclusions	115
3. Literary History	119
3.1. The identity of the literary history and its relations to criticism and literary theory	119
3.2. The beginnings of the discipline; the 19 th century	122
3.3. The conception of literary history in the 20 th century	124
3.4. Extrinsic and intrinsic	126
3.5. Classification – the privileged method of classical literary history	129
3.6. Literary history: a discipline of continuity?	130
3.7. Diachronic and synchronic	137
3.8. Reasoning – between relativism and absolutism	141
3.9. The narrative literary history	143
3.10. Revisions of the subject of literary history	145
3.11. Conclusions	151
4. The Variable Reference	155
Bibliography	159