

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements11

Preface.....15

1 Representing Yellow Fever: Contagion, Crisis, and Control.....21

1.1 Approaches to Reading Yellow Fever Texts21

1.2 Yellow Fever Fiction as Symbolic Action.....26

1.3 Conceptualizing Yellow Fever Representations:
Nation, Gender, and Race30

1.4 Etiology and History of Yellow Fever32

1.5 Making Yellow Fever American:
Medical Discourses and Atlantic Conversations41

1.6 Perspectivizing Yellow Fever Historiography and Literature.....48

2 Yellow Fever in 1793—A Case in Point:
Resolving Crises and Building the Nation61

2.1 Introducing Yellow Fever in 179361

2.2 Infecting the Nation: Charles Brockden Brown’s *Arthur
Mervyn, or, Memoirs of the Year 1793* (1799/1800)63

2.3 Political Dimensions: Matthew Carey’s Short Account (1793)
and Absalom Jones and Richard Allen’s Narrative (1794)75

2.4 Looking Back to 1793: The Philadelphia Epidemic in/and Cultural Memory82

2.5 Yellow Fever and the Nation.....91

3	Displaying Disease: Yellow Fever Visualized	93
3.1	Picturing Yellow Fever.....	93
3.2	Establishing an Etiology and Iconography of Pictured Disease	95
3.3	Yellow Fever under the Touristic or Distant Gaze: An Aesthetics of the Destructive Sublime	108
3.4	Capturing Yellow Fever on Camera.....	122
3.5	Visual Functionalizations of Yellow Fever	128
4	Gendered Accounts of Yellow Fever.....	131
4.1	Women, Writing, and Yellow Fever.....	131
4.2	Between Nostalgia and Women's Rights: Mary Faith Floyd's The Nereid (1871).....	137
4.3	Yellow Fever and the Nursing Experience: Wesley Bradshaw's Angel Agnes (1873) and Mattie Stephenson (1873)	145
4.4	"Volunteers to the fever district": Reversing Gender Roles in Elizabeth Stuart Phelps's "Zerviah Hope" (1880)	162
4.5	"The fever creeping into her veins": Yellow Fever as Liminal Experience in Mollie E. M. Davis's The Queen's Garden (1900).....	172
4.6	The Transformative Potential of Yellow Fever Narratives	190
5	Race and Racial Relations in Yellow Fever Writing.....	193
5.1	Theorizing Yellow Fever and Race.....	193
5.2	Yellow Fever at Sea.....	196
5.3	New Orleans: Race Capital, Disease Capital	210
5.4	Yellow Fever and the African American Experience	224
6	Conclusion	233

7	Bibliography.....	239
7.1	Yellow Fever Fiction, Poetry, and Drama 1793–1916	239
7.2	Yellow Fever Fiction of the Late Twentieth and Twenty-First Century	248
8	Works Cited	249
9	Index.....	277