

Contents

General Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
List of Tables and Figures	xv
List of Abbreviations, Symbols, and Typographic Conventions	xvii
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Descriptive and expressive language	1
1.2 From semantics to syntax	3
1.3 Overview of the chapters	5
1.4 How to approach this book	8
2 The expressive function of language	10
2.1 Some historical background	10
2.2 Expressive phenomena	13
2.2.1 Expressive adjectives	14
2.2.2 Expressive intensifiers	19
2.2.3 Expressive vocatives	21
2.2.4 Further cases	22
2.3 Expressivity in multidimensional semantics	27
2.4 Summary	34
3 Syntax, features, and agreement	35
3.1 Introduction	35
3.2 Some basic ingredients of a minimalist syntax	35
3.3 Syntactic features	39
3.4 Varieties of Agree	45
3.4.1 C-Agree	46
3.4.2 S-Agree	48
3.4.3 $\uparrow$ Agree	52
3.5 Phases	56
3.6 Syntax meets speech acts	61
3.7 Summary	67
4 Expressive adjectives	69
4.1 Introduction	69
4.2 The grammar of EAs	72

4.2.1	Standard syntax	72
4.2.2	Special syntax	78
4.2.3	Semantics and two kinds of EAs	83
4.2.4	Syntax-semantic mismatches	86
4.3	Excursus: comparison to other non-local adjectives	89
4.3.1	The occasional -construction	90
4.3.2	Other non-local adjectives	91
4.3.3	Syntactic and semantic particularities of non-local adjectives	92
4.3.4	Comparing non-local adjectives and EAs	93
4.4	Just pragmatics?	94
4.4.1	An anti-syntactic approach	95
4.4.2	Culprit hypothesis	96
4.4.3	Experimental data	97
4.5	The role of syntax	99
4.5.1	Syntactic constraints	100
4.5.2	Experimental evidence for syntactic barriers	101
4.5.3	No argument lowering	103
4.6	A syntactic approach to the interpretation of EAs	108
4.6.1	An agreement-based solution	109
4.6.2	EAs can only look up	112
4.6.3	Syntactic blocking	112
4.6.4	Multiple agreement	113
4.7	Semantic interpretation	115
4.7.1	The interpretation of pure EAs	116
4.7.2	The interpretation of mixed EAs	119
4.8	Summary	122
5	Expressive intensifiers	124
5.1	Introduction	124
5.2	Expressive intensifiers and external intensifying constructions	130
5.2.1	Expressive intensifiers in internal adjectival position	130
5.2.2	Expressive intensifiers in internal adnominal position	137
5.2.3	Adjectival external intensifying constructions	143
5.2.4	Nominal external intensifying constructions	151
5.3	Toward a syntactic analysis of EDCs	154
5.3.1	The syntactic structure of EDCs	155
5.3.2	EDCs are derived by movement	156
5.3.3	External EIs undergo complex quantifier formation with the determiner	157
5.3.4	Expressivity is a feature of D	161
5.3.5	EIs move to realize expressivity in D	163

5.3.6	Incorporation with $D^0$ is ersatz inflection	165
5.3.7	Intervention effects	167
5.4	Conclusion and outlook	169
5.5	Appendix	171
6	Expressive vocatives	172
6.1	Introduction	172
6.2	Standard vocatives	173
6.2.1	Building standard vocatives	175
6.2.2	Vocative functions	178
6.2.3	Semantic properties of vocatives	183
6.3	Expressive vocatives: the data	187
6.3.1	Expressive vocatives and vocative functions	189
6.3.2	Structural types of eVocs	191
6.3.3	No embedding of eVocs	193
6.3.4	The pronominal element of eVocs	195
6.3.5	Integrated eVocs and epithets	199
6.3.6	Vocative doubling	205
6.4	Previous semantic approaches to vocatives	207
6.4.1	Predelli 2008	207
6.4.2	Eckardt 2014	212
6.4.3	Portner 2007	216
6.4.4	Comparison of the three approaches	221
6.5	Previous syntactic approaches to vocatives	222
6.5.1	The speech act phrase approach	223
6.5.2	Corver's analysis of expressive vocatives	226
6.6	Toward an analysis of expressive vocatives	228
6.6.1	The semantics of integrated eVocs	229
6.6.2	The semantics of parenthetical eVocs	232
6.6.3	The semantics of autonomous eVocs	241
6.6.4	The semantics of calls	247
6.6.5	Where does the expressivity of eVocs come from?	250
6.7	Expressivity and the syntax of expressive vocatives	253
6.8	Summary	259
7	Looking back and looking ahead	261
7.1	Introduction	261
7.2	Expressivity as a syntactic feature	261
7.2.1	Expressivity can agree	261
7.2.2	Expressivity can trigger movement	262
7.2.3	Expressivity can be selected for	263

7.3 A future for expressive features	264
7.3.1 Why adjectives?	264
7.3.2 Expressivity and its relation to D	265
7.3.3 Cross-linguistic variation	265
7.3.4 Diachronic development and acquisition	265
References	267
Author Index	281
Subject Index	284