

Contents

Introduction.....	13
1. Review of Critical Studies and Analytical Framework
1.1 Critical trends in Woolf's works	17
1.1.1 Chronological review of major critiques.....	17
1.1.2 The contribution of stylistics and narratology to the study of Woolf's texts.....	21
1.1.3 Hypothesis.....	26
1.2 Analytical framework of this study.....	27
1.2.1 What is 'modernism'?.....	27
1.2.2 Modernism and focalization: concept of frame theory	29
1.2.3 Focalization and speech and thought presentation modes.....	31
1.2.4 'Stream of consciousness' and 'internal monologue'.....	34
1.2.5 Non-reflective areas of consciousness: 'narrated perception' and 'psycho-narration'.....	35
1.2.6 Representation of consciousness by an unspecified subject.....	39
2. Pursuit of the Individual (1): Groping for Internal Realism
2.1 Buds of internal realism in The Voyage Out (1915).....	47
2.1.1 Critical review: modes of writing in The Voyage Out	47
2.1.2 Analyses of thought presentation in The Voyage Out , Austen's Emma , and Eliot's Middlemarch	48

2.1.3	Flowing consciousness in a ‘moment’: analysis of thought representation.....	58
2.2	Woolf’s early experiments in four short fictions.....	62
2.2.1	Creation of unity	64
2.2.2	Experimental nature of narrator in the short fictions.....	67
2.3	Experimental narrative structure and modes of focalization in Jacob’s Room (1922)	77
2.3.1	Authorial narrator versus ubiquitous narrator.....	77
2.3.2	Representation of consciousness from the character’s inner perspective	83
3.	Pursuit of the Individual (2): Establishing Internal Realism
3.1	Mrs Dalloway (1925) as the consummation of Woolfian internal realism.....	87
3.1.1	The use and effect of Direct Thought in ‘Mrs Dalloway in Bond Street’ (1922).....	87
3.1.2	The use and effect of Free Indirect Thought in Mrs Dalloway	92
3.1.3	Tunnelling process for telling the past	96
3.2	To the Lighthouse (1927) as the refinement of Woolfian internal realism	107
3.2.1	The structure of the work	107
3.2.2	The representation of human relationships	109
3.2.3	The presentation of the eternity of life	114
4.	The Bridge Between To the Lighthouse (1927) and The Waves (1931)
4.1	The limits of internal realism	123
4.1.1	Background of ‘Moments of Being: Slater’s Pins Have No Points’ (1927).....	124
4.1.2	An ultimate form of internal realism	125
4.1.3	Problems with narrative techniques in internal realism.....	131
4.1.4	The evaluation of ‘truth’ and limitations of internal realism.....	136

4.2	Anonymous mind as presented in two short works of 1929	138
4.2.1	Woolf's change of mind in 1929	138
4.2.2	Stylistic analysis of the focalizer one (1): 'The Lady in the Looking-Glass: A Reflection'	143
4.2.3	Stylistic analysis of the focalizer one (2): 'The Fascination of the Pool'	150
5.	Pursuit of the Collective
5.1	The unspecified focalizer in The Waves (1931)	157
5.1.1	The use of an unspecified subject, the mind , in two drafts of The Waves	159
5.1.2	The dramatic soliloquies in The Waves : universal spirit and collective unconsciousness	163
5.1.3	Empty centre in the Interludes	166
5.1.4	The unconscious as represented in the dramatic soliloquies	169
5.2	The unconscious world in The Years (1937)	172
5.2.1	Woolf and Jung's collective unconscious	172
5.2.2	Facts and vision in The Years	180
5.2.3	The presentation of collective unconscious in The Years	182
5.3	Collective unconscious in Between the Acts (1941)	192
5.3.1	Woolf's 'shock-receiving capacity'	193
5.3.2	Eccentricity of focalization: analysis of a passage from Between the Acts	195
5.3.3	Collective unconscious embodied by Woolf	200
	Bibliography	207
	Index	217