

Contents

1	Introduction	1
2	Author's Perspective and Primary Research Interest	5
3	State of the Art	11
4	The Transrational Model	17
4.1	The Five Families of Peace and Primary Themes	18
4.2	Levels of Conflict	22
4.3	Layers of Conflict	23
5	Elicitive Conflict Mapping	27
5.1	The three Principles of Elicitive Conflict Transformation and the Care of the Self	28
5.2	Mapping the Middle East Conflict	34
5.2.1	Conflict Transposition and Conflict Transformation	36
5.2.2	My Entry Point: Clashing Narratives and Strong Truths	39
5.2.3	The Many Truths around Israel and Palestine	41
5.2.4	My truths are weak	45
6	Research Ethics: I Have No Morals!	47
7	Music in Conflict Transformation	53
7.1	The Political Potential of Music	53
7.2	Performed and Recorded Music	55
7.3	Vernacular Music: The Potential of the Here and Now	56
8	Further Research Interest	61
9	Case Studies	65
9.1	Where Strong Truths Crack: The Jerusalem Youth Chorus	65
9.1.1	Mental-Societal Disturbances: Ceci n'est pas une Guitare! ..	67

9.1.2	Imagining and Experiencing Home on the Social-Communal Layers	70
9.1.3	Sexual Energy: An Implicit Potential for Conflict Transformation	75
9.1.4	Another Level of Dialogue: Vernacular Moments and Spiritual Potential	76
9.1.5	Potentials, Limitations and Critique of the Jerusalem Youth Chorus	80
9.2	Songs Are The Soul's Language: Eskenderella	82
9.2.1	Mental-Societal Potentials: Sounding the Charge for the Egyptian Uprising Revolution	84
9.2.2	When Vernacular Potential Unfolds: Spirituality in the midst of Revolutionary Dynamics	87
9.2.3	Hidden Messages: The Sexual Family-Layers	91
9.2.4	A Homogenous Group and Random Audiences: The Social-Communal Layers	92
9.2.5	Potentials, Limitations and Critique of Eskenderella	92
10	Conclusion	95
	List of References	103