
Contents

| | |
|---|-----|
| Acknowledgments | ix |
| Introduction..... | 1 |
| The Rise of the Literary Riddle..... | 6 |
| A Brief History of Riddles..... | 10 |
| Notes..... | 29 |
| Chapter One. "The Infinite which is Hid": William Blake and the Puzzle of Albion's Wake..... | 30 |
| The Wit's Magazine..... | 31 |
| "An Island in the Moon" | 36 |
| Blake and the Oral and Literary Tradition..... | 39 |
| Waking the Body of Albion: Blake's Jerusalem | 46 |
| Notes..... | 58 |
| Chapter Two. "Lucent Syrops, Tinct with Cinnamon": John Keats and the Charm of "The Eve of St. Agnes" | 60 |
| Notes..... | 76 |
| Chapter Three. "The Cup and the Lip": Charles Dickens and the Riddle of Our Mutual Friend | 78 |
| Notes..... | 103 |
| Conclusion | 106 |
| Epilogue. "The Riddle that Arts Itself Is": Sensing the Sensible in the Endgames of Literary Theory..... | 108 |
| Notes..... | 120 |
| Appendix: Glossary of Riddle Types | 121 |
| Bibliography | 125 |
| Index | 131 |