

Contents

Acknowledgements.....	xi
1 Beyond the Rubble.....	1
2 Fiction and the Representation of 9/11: Theoretical Trajectories	25
2.1 “The Bare Bones of Narrative”: Fiction, Mimesis, and the Pitfalls of Representation.....	25
2.1.1 Haunted	25
2.1.2 Writing	29
2.2 Perspectives on the Literature of 9/11: A Survey of Material and Research	37
2.3 History, Trauma, Fiction: Aspects of Methodology.....	57
2.3.1 History and Narrative	57
2.3.2 Trauma	61
2.3.3 Memory, Fiction, Event.....	68
2.3.4 Historic Rupture and the Exceptionalism of Suffering.....	72
2.4 Ground Zero Fiction: Toward a Definition.....	79
2.4.1 What is a 9/11 Novel?	79
2.4.2 Contexts of Literary History.....	86
3 Ground Zero Novels: A Tentative Typology	95
3.1 “We Don’t Know What the Next Sentence Should Be”: Metonymic Approaches	95

3.1.1	Terror and Representation:
	The Art of Not Writing about September 11	95
3.1.2	“Straight Out of Independence Day”: Premonitions.....	99
3.1.3	Ellipsis: Disruptive Strategies of Unnarration.....	105
3.1.4	“The Phantom Thrill, the Fleeting Terror”:
	Implication and Projection	113
3.1.5	“Is Your Hijacker Suicidal?” The Satirical Mode	122
3.1.6	Drawing the Lines: Unnarrative Ground Zero Fiction	133
3.2	“America Needs to Change the Story”: Salvational Approaches.	137
3.2.1	Restoring Order: Narratives of Redemption.....	137
3.2.2	“God Wins. Period”: Religious Salvation	143
3.2.3	“She Needed This Closure”: Counterhistories of 9/11	159
3.2.4	“Pattern Recognition”:
	Cognitive Salvation and Conspiracy Theory.....	175
3.2.5	The Apocalyptic Imagination	193
3.3	“Archaeologists of the Present”: Diagnostic Approaches.....	197
3.3.1	“Forbidden Thoughts”: Political Interventions.....	197
3.3.2	Arab, Muslim, and South Asian Specters:
	Identity in Trouble.....	203
3.3.3	“We’re All the Same People. And We are All Falling”:
	Native American Rewritings of the Homeland	217
3.3.4	Identity Construction Revisited.....	226
3.3.5	Local and Global Memories	235
3.4	“There Was Something About These Men You Wanted to Become”:
	Appropriative Approaches	241
3.4.1	Perpetrators and Scandals.....	241
3.4.2	Writing Terrorism from the Other Side:
	Historical Perspectives	243
3.4.3	“Muhammad Atta’s Body”:
	Corporeal Approaches to the 9/11 Hijackers.....	249
3.4.4	“Wanting to Prove Yourself”:
	John Updike’s Terrorist (2006).....	260

3.4.5 “This Hatred Gives him Strength”: Andre Dubus III’s The Garden of Last Days (2008)	266
3.4.6 “There Are No Others”: Don DeLillo’s Falling Man (2007)	273
3.4.7 Speaking for Others: Aesthetic and Ethical Challenges	281
3.5 “The Shadow of No Towers”: Symbolic Approaches.....	285
3.5.1 “Twin Epicenters of the Universe of Suffering”: The Expanded Semantics of 9/11	285
3.5.2 “Phantom Bodies” and the Wounded City: Medical Crises	289
3.5.3 “Being Twins Meant Something of Quite Another Order”: Crises of the Domestic Sphere.....	300
3.5.4 “A World From Which There’s No Appeal”: Religious Crises.....	318
3.5.5 Revisiting the Domestic Turn.....	336
3.6 “Art is an Arrangement Against Nothingness”: Writely Approaches	343
3.6.1 Beyond “Cultural Hypnosis”: Writing against the Grain	343
3.6.2 Crises of Art, Aesthetics of Crisis	349
3.6.3 “In New York, We’re All Cops Now”: Allegorical Novels.....	356
3.6.4 “A Patch of Sky Where There Should Be None”: Richard Powers’s Neurological Metafiction	371
3.6.5 “Every New Yorker was Capable of Flight”: Jonathan Safran Foer’s Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close	378
3.6.6 “Ground Zero was a Cipher”: Ronald Sukenick’s Last Fall	388
3.6.7 “Living Language is Not Diminished”: Writerly Memorials	397
4 Topographies of 9/11	401
5 Bibliography.....	415
5.1 Primary Sources	415
5.1.1 American 9/11 Novels.....	415

5.1.2 International 9/11 and 9/12 Novels	420
5.1.3 American Novels Loosely Associated with 9/11	423
5.1.4 9/11 Poetry and Short Fiction	423
5.1.5 9/11 Drama	425
5.1.6 9/11 Children's Books and Comics	427
5.1.7 Autobiographies, Diaries, Memoirs, and Journalism	427
5.1.8 Selected 9/11 Films	428
5.2 Secondary Sources	429
6 Index of Names	485