

CONTENTS

1	The Gut Feelings of Medical Culture Manon Mathias and Alison M. Moore	1
2	The Great American Evil—Indigestion: Digestive Health and Democratic Politics in Walt Whitman Tripp Rebrovick	15
3	The “Second Brain”: Dietetics and Ideology in Nineteenth-Century France Bertrand Marquer	37
4	Situating the Anal Freud in Nineteenth-Century Imaginaries of Excrement and Colonial Primitivity Alison M. Moore	55
5	Food for Thought: Consuming and Digesting as Political Metaphor in French Satirical Prints Dorothy Johnson	85
6	Being “Hangry”: Gastrointestinal Health and Emotional Well-Being in the Long Nineteenth Century Emilie Taylor-Brown	109

7	Visceralism and the Superior Mind in French Medicine and Literature, 1750–1850 Anne Vila	133
8	Digestion and Brain Work in Zola and Huysmans Manon Mathias	155
9	Textual (In)Digestions in Flaubert, Zola and Huysmans: Accumulation, Extraction, Regulation Larry Duffy	177
10	Hygiene, Food and Digestion in Post-Unified Italy: Paolo Mantegazza’s Medicine in the Kitchen and Beyond (1861–1900) Cristiano Turbil	205
11	The State and the Stomach: Feeding the Social Organism in 1830s New England Molly S. Laas	225
12	Food Faiths: Gut Science and Spiritual Eating Catherine L. Newell	243
	Index	261