

Contents

List of Figures	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: Toward a New Model of Fragmented History	1
PART I
Theory and Historiography	15
1 Historiography of Texts: From Literacy to Literacy Practices within the Anglo-Saxon School of Thought	17
2 Scribal Culture in Transnational Perspective	38
3 Local and Global Perspectives as Platforms for Barefoot Historians: A Microhistorical Approach	55
PART II
The Structure of Culture and Education	73
4 Setting the Scene within the Hard Rock of Reality	75
5 Vernacular Literacy between Two Campaigns	89
6 Emotions and Education	105
PART III
Barefoot Historians and their Everyday Life	121
7 Childhood, Local Culture, and Educational Processes	123

vi Contents

8	A Quest for a Space—A No-Place: Scribal Communities as Institutional Structures	152
9	Solidarity with Substance: “History Is no Respector of Persons, It Depicts both High and Low”	174
10	Postscript: Cornerstone for a Creative Space in the Nineteenth Century	202
	Bibliography	219
	Index	239