

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements.....	7
I. INTRODUCTION
1. Methodological Introduction.....	11
2. David Lodge: a Selective Approach.....	15
2.1. The Small World of David Lodge
2.1.1. Roman Catholicism
2.1.2. The University.....	19
2.2. Critical and Creative Contribution to the British Literary Scene.....	21
2.2.1. Fiction.....	22
2.2.2. Criticism.....	29
2.2.2.1. Mapping the Field of Contemporary Fiction.....	33
2.2.2.2. In Defence of Realism.....	37
2.2.2.3. Taming Radical Form: David Lodge's Attitude towards Theory.....	40
II. THEORISING INTIMACY
1. Innermost Fabrics: Intimacy and Related Concepts.....	47
2. Contextualising Intimacy: Intimate Relations from the Sixties to the Eighties.....	61
2.1. Revolution in the Sixties: Three Settings.....	64
2.2. Changes in the Sphere of the Intimate.....	76
3. Textualising Intimacy: Intimacy and the Novel.....	93
3.1. Desire in Narrative:
Roland Barthes' The Pleasure of the Text	95
3.2. Intimacy and Literary Genre:
The Case of Comedy and Romance.....	98

III. INTIMATE DISCOURSES IN CHANGING PLACES AND SMALL WORLD

1. Changing Places: A Tale of Two Campuses	121
1.1. The Novel in Context
1.1.1. Private Interests Versus Public Affairs.....	122
1.1.2. The Novel and the Sixties Sexual Revolution.....	135
1.1.3. Changing Alliances between Sex, Marriage and Love.....	147
1.2. A Generic Approach to Changing Places as a Comedy.....	151
2. Small World: An Academic Romance	169
2.1. The Novel in Context
2.1.1. The Redefinition of the Private and the Public.....	170
2.1.2. Gender Roles in the Novel.....	176
2.1.3. Sex, Marriage and Romantic Love.....	188
2.2. A Generic Approach to Small World as a Romance.....	197
IV. CONCLUSIONS	213
Appendix: A Biographical and Contextual Outline.....	217
Bibliographical References.....	223