

'Relations Stop Nowhere'
The Common Literary Foundations of German and American Literature 1830-1917

Hugh Ridley

Amsterdam - New York, NY 2007

Contents

Preface	7
PART ONE: GERMAN AND AMERICAN LITERARY HISTORY	11
Chapter 1: Introduction to National Literatures	11
Nations needed National Literature	13
Germany and the USA as Latecomers	24
Unpromising Beginnings	28
Chapter 2: The Early Years of German and American Literary History	33
The Early Campaign for a National Literature in America	38
Literary History and Nature	43
Chapter 3: Literary History and Democratic Nation Building	47
Literary History and Real History	47
German Aspirations for America	49
Post-1848 Reconsiderations of Real History	56
The Politics of Cultural Despair	58
Chapter 4: Democracy and Realism	67
The Failure of Realism	70
American Nineteenth Century Realism	74
Looking for American Realism after Matthiesen	77
The Later Search for Realism in Germany	80
American Literature Viewed after the Empire	84
Chapter 5: Hunting for American Aesthetics	91
Denying the Critical Tradition	98
Genre	100
Excursus: Fontane and Emerson	102
More Considerations of Genre: The Romance	109
Final Thoughts: Aesthetics and Religion	111

Chapter 6: Exclusions from the Canon	119
Popular Literature	119
Women in the Two Literary Histories	130
Chapter 7: Literary History and Anthropology	139
Literature and Anthropology from the Early Days	141
Volkskunde	147
Kultur and Zivilisation	156
The Last Twenty Years	163
PART TWO: THE MID-ATLANTIC SPACE	171
Chapter 8:
The American Heart of Darkness: Charles Sealsfield and the West	175
The Prairie on the Jacinto River	176
Sealsfield and American Literature	177
Out of Civilization	182
European or American Themes?	188
The Lesson of the Frontier	193
History: A Democratic Order in the Making	198
Chapter 9: American Idylls beyond Buffalo Bill	201
At the foot of the rainbow – Utopian thought	201
Exotics Away From Home	213
The Primitive Without Violence	225
Mr Beissel and the Primitives	229
Mann and Whitman	242
Chapter 10: Emerson in the German and American Traditions	247
Weimar, Concord and Naumburg	253
History	258
The Avoidance of Tragedy and the Novel	270
Modern Reassessments	279
Bibliography	283
Index	309