1. The Effect of Americanization on the Earnings of Foreign-born Men	17
1.1. Introduction	19
1.2. The Hypotheses and Statistical Approach	20
1.2.1. Hypotheses	20
1.2.2. Estimating Equation	24
1.2.3. Data Base	26
1.3. Analysis of Earnings for the Native and Foreign Born	26
1.3.1. Pooled Sample	27
1.3.2. Comparing Native- and Foreign-born Regression Coefficients	29
1.3.3. Decomposing the Difference in Earnings	31
1.3.4. The Lower Coefficient of Schooling	32
1.3.5. Aliens	33
1.4. Country of Origin	34
1.4.1. Mexican, Cuban, and Asian/African Immigrants	34
1.4.2. English-speaking and Non-English-speaking Country of Origin	36
1.5. Summary and Conclusion	37
2. Assimilation, Changes in Cohort Quality, and the Earnings of Immigrants	41
2.1. Introduction	42
2.2. Framework	44
2.3. The Earnings of Immigrants	48
2.4. The Relative Earnings of Immigrants	55
2.5. Summary	61
Appendix	62

3. Is the New Immigration Less Skilled Than the Old?	67
3.1. Introduction	68
3.2. Changing Circumstances and Immigrant Quality	72
3.2.1. Trends in Supply	72
3.2.2. Trends in Demand	73
3.2.3. Summary	76
3.3. Immigrant Earnings by Country of Origin	76
3.4. The Level of Schooling of the Foreign Born	78
3.5. Immigrant Quality – Ceteris Paribus	81
3.5.1. White Immigrants	83
3.5.2. Mexican Immigrants	84
3.5.3. Cuban Immigrants	85
3.5.4. Asian Immigrants	86
3.5.5. Summary	87
3.6. Summary and Conclusions	87
4. Self-Selection and the Earnings of Immigrants	91
4.1. Theoretical Framework	93
4.2. Empirical Framework	102
4.3. Regression Results from the 1970–1980 Censuses	104
4.4. Determinants of Immigrant Quality	110
4.4.1. Determinants of the Entry Wage Differential	112
4.4.2. Determinants of the Rate of Assimilation	114
4.4.3. Determinants of the Change in Cohort Quality	116
4.4.4. Determinants of the Emigration Rate	119
4.5. Summary	120
5. Human Capital and the Labor Market Adjustment of Immigrants: Testing Alternative Hypotheses	123
5.1. Introduction	124
5.2. The Model and Its Implications	126
5.2.1. Transferability of Skills	126
5.2.2. Self-Selection of Immigrants	128
5.3. Selective Emigration of the Foreign Born	130
5.3.1. Country Differences in Emigration	131
5.3.2. Longitudinal Data on Earnings	133
5.3.3. Longitudinal Data on Occupation	134
5.4. The Schooling of Foreign-born Emigrants	135
5.5. Intergenerational Transmission of Abilities	139
5.6. Summary and Conclusions	142

6. Are Immigrants Favorably Self-Selected?
An Economic Analysis	145
6.1. Introduction	146
6.2. The Human Capital Migration Model	149
6.3. Alternative Models	154
6.3.1. Asymmetric Information	154
6.3.2. Short-Term Migrants	155
6.3.3. The Roy Model-Relative Skill Differentials	156
6.3.4. Noneconomic Migrants	157
6.3.5. Empirical Studies of Selectivity: Migrants and Return Migrants	158
6.3.6. The Earnings of Migrants and the Children of Immigrants	160
6.4. Summary and Conclusions	161
7. The "Negative" Assimilation of Immigrants: A Special Case	163
7.1. The Assimilation Model	164
7.2. The Application to Immigrants	168
7.2.1. United States	169
7.2.2. Australia	178
7.2.3. Sweden	179
7.3. Immigrant Versus Native Earnings Over Time	180
7.4. Summary and Conclusion	187
Appendix	188
Part III: Ethnic Networks and Neighborhoods	195
8. The Self-Employment Experience of Immigrants	197
8.1. Introduction	198
8.2. Framework	200
8.3. Assimilation and Self-Employment	205
8.4. Enclaves and the Self-Employment of Immigrants	212
8.5. Summary	214
9. Differences in Education and Earnings Across Racial and Ethnic Groups: Tastes, Discrimination, and Investments in Child Quality	217
9.1. Introduction	218
9.2. Multigroup Perspective on Schooling and Earnings	220
9.3. Testing Alternative Hypotheses	222
9.3.1. Supply and Demand for Funds for Investment	222

Contents

9.3.2. Differences in Supply Conditions	224
9.3.3. Discrimination	225
9.3.4. Productivity of Schooling	226
9.4. Fertility and Child Quality: The Model	226
9.5. Application of the Child Quality Investment Model	228
9.5.1. Group Differences in Skill Levels Across Generations	228
9.5.2. Group Differences in Fertility	230
9.5.3. Group Differences in Labor Force Participation of Mothers	232
9.5.4. Group Differences in Intergenerational Transfers	234
9.6. Summary and Conclusion	234
Appendix	237
10. Ethnic Capital and Intergenerational Mobility	241
10.1. Introduction	242
10.2. Theory	243
10.3. Empirical Framework and Data	247
10.4. Empirical Results	253
10.5. Ethnic Capital and Parental Birthplace	259
10.6. Ethnic Capital and Black Intergenerational Mobility	262
10.7. Summary	264
11. Ethnicity, Neighborhoods, and Human-Capital Externalities	267
11.1. Ethnicity and Neighborhoods	269
11.2. Econometric Framework	277
11.3. Results	282
11.4. Ethnic Capital and the Ethnic Composition of the Neighborhood	292
11.5. Ethnic Capital and Measurement Error	295
11.6. Summary	298

12. Ethnic Networks and Language Proficiency
Among Immigrants	301
12.1. Introduction	302
12.2. The Data	304
12.3. A Model of Dominant Language Fluency	305
12.4. Estimation and Decomposition	307
12.5. Conclusion	315
Appendix A	316
Appendix B	319
13. Do Enclaves Matter in Immigrant Adjustment?	323
13.1. Introduction	324
13.2. Immigrant Concentrations: Hypotheses	325
13.2.1. Immigrant Flows	325
13.2.2. Immigrant Concentrations	326
13.2.3. Ethnic Goods	327
13.2.4. Immigrant "Crowding"	330
13.2.5. Consequences of Concentrations	331
13.3. The Data	332
13.3.1. Defining the Population Under Study	332
13.3.2. Defining the Variables	332
13.3.3. The Statistical Techniques	333
13.4. Analysis of Language	333
13.4.1. The Language Model	333
13.4.2. Statistical Analysis	336
13.5. Analysis of Earnings	339
13.5.1. The Earnings Model	339
13.5.2. Statistical Analysis	340
13.6. Summary and Conclusion	344
13.6.1. Summary	344
13.6.2. Policy Implications	345
Appendix A	347
Appendix B	356

Part IV: Language and Human Capital	361
14. Speaking, Reading, and Earnings among Low-skilled Immigrants	363
14.1. Language and Earnings	365
14.2. The Survey Data	367
14.3. Speaking and Reading English	369
14.3.1. Speaking English	369
14.3.2. Reading English	373
14.4. Earnings	377
14.5. Summary and Conclusion	381
Appendix	383
15. Educational Mismatch: Are High-skilled Immigrants Really Working in High-Skilled Jobs, and What Price Do They Pay If They Are Not?	385
15.1. Why Do Education Mismatches Occur?	389
15.2. Education Levels of the Native- and Foreign-born Populations	392
15.3. Literature Review of the ORU Technique	394
15.4. Measurement of Mismatches and Data	396
15.5. Statistical Analyses	397
15.5.1. The Incidence of Skill Mismatch	398
15.5.2. Analyses for High-Skilled Workers	401
15.5.3. Analyses by Occupation	405
15.5.4. Analyses by Level of Education	408
15.5.5. Analysis of the Effect of Education by Duration of U.S. Residency	412
15.6. Conclusion	414
Appendix A: Definitions of Variables	417
Appendix B: Regression Analyses of Effects of Education on Earnings	420
Part V: Impact on the Economy	425
16. The Economic Benefits from Immigration	427
16.1. The Immigration Surplus	431
16.2. Some Problems with the Calculation of the Immigration Surplus	435
16.3. External Effects and the Immigration Surplus	436
16.4. Immigrant Skills and the Immigration Surplus	438
16.4.1. A Simple Case: Ignoring Capital	439
16.4.2. Capital and the Skills of Immigrants	440
16.5. Conclusion	444
Appendix	446

17. The Labor Demand Curve is Downward Sloping: Reexamining the Impact of Immigration on the Labor Market ...	449
17.1. Introduction	450
17.2. Measuring the Labor Market Impact of Immigration	451
17.3. Data	454
17.4. Basic Results	462
17.5. A Comparison with the Spatial Correlation Approach	465
17.6. Refining the Definition of Skills	468
17.6.1. Measuring Effective Experience	468
17.7. Measuring Effective Skills	471
17.8. A Structural Approach to Immigration and Factor Demand	472
17.8.1. Theory and Evidence	472
17.8.2. Simulating the Wage Effects of Immigration	476
17.9. Conclusion	480
Appendix A: Variable Definitions	482
Appendix B	484
18. Does Immigration Grease the Wheels of the Labor Market?	485
18.1. Framework	487
18.1.1. The Location Decisions of Native Workers and Immigrants	488
18.1.2. Welfare Implications	491
18.2. Data	500
18.3. Empirical Results	507
18.3.1. Basic Regressions	508
18.3.2. Sensitivity of Regression Results	511
18.3.3. Native Internal Migration	514
18.4. Immigration and Wage Convergence	516
18.5. Estimating the Efficiency Gain	521
18.6. Conclusion	528
