

Contents

Foreword	v
Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xx
1 Australian literature and the problem of history	1
Australian literature and the history of the real	1
Reading texts, reading culture	6
Fragments and literary history	14
2 The bastard complex	23
Aborigines and Australian identity	24
The foundation event	30
The genocidal phase	38
3 Return of the repressed	50
The dilemma of romance	52
The epic turn	59
Aborigines and film	64
4 Dark traditions	71
Reading Aboriginal culture	74
The politics of mediation	77
The functions of myth	86
5 Aboriginal voices	91
Land as theme	92
Transformations	97
Versions of history	101
Aboriginal polyphony	107
6 Crimes and punishments	116
The convict system	118
The spectacle of punishment	120
The bushranger myth	131
The uses of deviancy	136

7	Reading the country	143
	Negations of the real	144
	The meaning of distance	151
	Explorer as hero	157
8	The Australian legend	162
	A gendered land	163
	A classic text revisited	167
	The ugly Australian	172
9	Multiculturalism and the fragment society	178
	Hidden countries	182
	The assimilationist muse	188
	Forms of multiculturalism	196
10	Reading the dream	204
	Antilanguage, anticulture	205
	Happy families	211
	The paranoiac culture	216
	Notes: sources and contexts	220
	Bibliography	235
	Index	250