

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xix
Abbreviations	xxiii
 Part I. Forming the Mimetic Tradition	 1
Chapter 1. Basic Patterns of Mimetic Action in Greek Thought	5
Plato; Aristotle; Neoplatonists; Summary
Chapter 2. Assimilation of Mimetic Doctrines with Old Testament Theology	32
Philo of Alexandria; Paul
Chapter 3. Mimesis as a Strategy of Historical Progress: The Patristic Stage of the Classical Tradition	49
Orientations Toward a New Concept of History; Augustine; Gregory the Great; Summary
 Part II. Changes in Mimetic Strategy During the Reconstitution of Europe	 115
Chapter 4. "Christ in Us Moving Toward the Father": Paschasius Radbertus's View of History	121
Chapter 5. Mimetic Principles of Church Government: Hincmar of Rheims	136
Chapter 6. Summary and Anticipation: The Transit of Jesus	162
Chapter 7. Strategic Reorientations	172
Chapter 8. Thomas Aquinas's Recapitulation Theory of Tradition	178
Chapter 9. Toward a New Theory of Progress by Augmentation	200
Mysticism; Humanism; Summary

Part III. Mimesis in the Renewal of the Classical Tradition: ca. 1500–1900

227

Chapter 10. Challenges to the Mimetic Tradition

229

Luther and Calvin; Empirical Psychologies

Chapter 11. Continuity of Mimetic Strategies in the Sixteenth
Century

247

Chapter 12. Continuity of Mimetic Strategies in the Enlightenment.

255

Perceptions of Decay

Between Nature and Art: Mimesis and the Spirit of Criticism
in the Enlightenment

Chapter 13. Mimesis by Augmentation in Two Theories of Historical Development

284

Hume; Herder

Chapter 14. Four Lutheran Reconstitutions of Mimesis as an Historical Strategy

310

Humboldt, Hegel, and Schleiermacher;
Goethe and Some Conclusions

Chapter 15. The Art of Revolution and the Nineteenth Century

337

Introduction; Old Paradigms at War;
The Poetry and Tradition of Revolution;
Analogy of Experience: Dilthey and Durkheim

Chapter 16. Epilogue: The longue durée of Mimesis

391

Appendix. Thinking Mimetically About History: Some Bibliographical Orientations

399

A Matter of Philosophical Commitment;
On the Trail of the Mimetic Tradition

Index

427