

Contents

Introduction: Adolescence in historical perspective	I-VI
1 Two theories on childhood and adolescence	1
Margaret Mead and adolescence (1); Polynesian adolescence after Mead (3); Philippe Ariès and traditional society (11); After Ariès (13); Man is changeable: the view of Van den Berg (22); Mead and Ariès and ancient society (24).
2 Youth or adolescence?	27
Introduction (27); Adolescence in preindustrial Europe? (30); Life-cycle servants (38); The ambiguity of youth (41); Conclusion (49).
3 Adolescence and ancient society.....	51
The status of adulthood in ancient society (58); The young as natural successors to the older generation (68); The two stereotypes of youth (71).
4 Youth and education in ancient society	75
Who received education in ancient society? (76); Education as a status-determinant (83); Age-grades in ancient education (88); Infant prodigies (123); Conclusion (131).
5 The physician in ancient society.....	135
The physician as an intellectual (138); The social status of the physician in the Hellenistic-Roman period (143); The physician in comparative perspective (151); The training of young physicians (155); Conclusion (163).
6 Legal professions.....	165
Lawyers in non-literary sources (169); Status and activities of nomikoi (173); Age and education of young lawyers (181); Conclusion (186).
7 Senatorial youth.....	187
The Roman senate: a perfect gerontocracy (188); Politics in late medieval Venice (198).
8 Roman knights.....	209

9 Youth and politics in the Greek East.....	221
Introduction (221); Expectations concerning young politicians-in-spe (225); The young benefactor (233); Offices and nominal office-holding (247); Offices (247); Teenagers and nominal office-holding (253); Hereditary council membership and patrobouloi (263).
10 Youth and municipal councils in the West.....	273
Oligarchy and 'homines novi': a new problem (276); Exclusivism in the ancient world (289); Heterogeneity inside the council (295); Hereditary membership? (301); Praetextati and the legal minimum-age (304); Underage councillors (312); The evidence (316).
 Bibliography.....	 335
Index of inscriptions.....	383
Index.....	395