

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: "Ain't That Work?"	1
Part One: The Works of Mind and Body
1 Manual Labor and the Problem of Literary Representation	15
2 The Meaning and Demeaning of Manual Labor at the Exhibitions of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association	40
Part Two: Eros and Labor
3 The Erotics of Labor in Melville's Redburn	61
4 Naturalized Labor and Natural History in Thoreau's A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers	80
Part Three: Labor's Gendered Body
5 Women Carved of Oak and Korl: The Female Body as the Site of Gendered Labor in Hawthorne and Davis	99
6 The Labored Discourse of Domesticity	120
7 Maternal Labor in the Work of "Literary Domesticists": Catharine Maria Sedgwick and Susan Warner	136
8 Literary Composition as Maternal Labor in Uncle Tom's Cabin	152

Part Four: Writing the Work of Slaves

- 9 The Meanings of Work and Song in Antebellum Slavery 175
- 10 Slavery, Work, and Song in Frederick Douglass's
Autobiographies 193

Part Five: Toward an Ontology of Labor

- 11 "By the Labor of My Hands Only": The Making and Unmaking of Walden 213
- Afterword 241
- Notes 245
- Index 269