

CONTENTS

Preface ix

Acknowledgments xi

- 1 Acquired Taste?
The Problem of the Viewer 1

- 2 Avant-garde Film Viewing
as Problem Solving 13
 - Perception 13
 - Schemata and Discourse Comprehension 17
 - The Pragmatic Perspective 25

- 3 The Poetic Strain of the Avant-garde 29
 - A Mode of Subjectivity 31
 - Coherence of Detail 40
 - Coherence Overall 46
 - Final Examples: Window Water Baby Moving
and Marasmus 52

- 4 Brakhage, Abstract Expressionism and Interpretive Schemata 61

- 5 Rounding Up the Usual Suspects:
The Minimal Strain and Interpretive
Schemata 71
 - Sitney's "Structural Film" 72
 - The Phenomenological Schema 77
 - The Art-Process Schema 80
 - The Anti-Illusion Schema 85
 - A Last Example 90

6	Film that Insists on Its Shape: The Minimal Strain	95
	The Simple Schematic Film	96
	The Evolution of the Simple Schematic Artwork	97
	Two Types of Simple Schemata	103
	Strategies of Engagement	106
	Solution Inhibition	107
	Solution Multiplication	112
	Complex Permutations	116
	The Limits of the Simple Schema	121
7	The Usual Suspects Still at Large: The Interpretive Schemata of the Assemblage Strain	126
	Pop Art's Interpretive Schemata	127
	The Minimalization of Warhol's Films	134
	Bruce Conner and the Absurd Mosaic	141
8	The Logic of the Absurd: The Assemblage Strain	145
	Collage Animation	146
	The Craft of the Image	149
	Inter-shot Relations and Overall Coherence	151
	A Final Example: Common Loss	155
	Avant-garde Compilation	157
	Open-ended Schemata	161
	Compilation Narratives	165
	A Final Example: The Great Blondino	170
	Afterword: The Avant-garde Cinema in the Age of Postmodernism	179
	Notes	187
	References	195
	Index	207