

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	vii
Preface and acknowledgements	x
Introduction	I
1 Domestic space and ancient Greek society	4
The Greek oikos : questions and problems	4
Examining the oikos	10
2 Approaches to the material record	21
Previous work on the archaeological remains of Greek households	21
Domestic architecture and social relations: some basic assumptions	29
3 From pots to people: towards a framework for interpreting the archaeological material	34
Approaching ancient Greek perceptions of domestic space	36
Searching for individuals in the archaeological record	39
Approaching the archaeology: towards an analytical framework	50
4 The city of Olynthos: a detailed case-study in domestic organisation	53
Introduction: the site	53
Reanalysing Olynthos: archaeological considerations	57
Investigating the organisation of individual houses	61
Comparing different households	74
Conclusions: house and society in fourth-century Olynthos	79
5 Olynthos in context: houses in northern, central and southern Greece and the Aegean islands	80
Introduction	80
Houses of the later fifth to mid-fourth centuries	81
Houses of the later fourth to earlier third century	114
Domestic spatial organisation in Greece: an overview	123

6	Regional patterns in domestic organisation: Greek houses from Sicily and southern Italy	127
	Houses of fifth-century date	129
	Houses of fourth-century date	135
	Houses of third-century date	144
	Rural housing in the hinterland of western Greek settlements	151
	Domestic spatial organisation in western Greece: an overview	152
7	House and society in the ancient Greek world	154
	The applicability of the oikos concept among different social or economic groups	156
	Origins and subsequent development of the Classical oikos	158
	Regional differences in the oikos concept	167
	Conclusions	173
	Appendices	176
	Notes	194
	References	198
	Index	216