CONTENTS

List of illustrations viii
Notes on contributors x
Acknowledgements xii

Introduction 1
STEPHANIE YOUNG

1 Stakeholders, consensus, participation and democracy 3
IAN FINLAY

Stakeholding, consensus, participation and democracy 5
Principles for achieving consensus 11
Perspectives of change 18

2 Stakeholders and partners in vocational education and training in Scotland 20
JOHN FAIRLEY

Introduction 20
Stakeholders and partners 21
Industrial training 24
The Manpower Services Commission and the response to unemployment 28
The new Scottish VET partnerships 32
Colleges and local authorities 35
Qualifications and targets 36
The devolving partnerships of the European Union 37
Conclusions 38

3 A consensus approach to policy-making: the case of the Republic of Ireland 41
JIM GLEESON

Introduction 41
The overall context: a consensus approach to national policy-making 42
Education policy-making: the National Education Convention 48
The discourse of partnership 53
Vocational education and training policy and practice 55
Provision of VET 60
Some concluding remarks 62
Appendix 3.1 Bodies represented at the National Education Convention 65

4 Transformation and reform of vocational education and training in Taiwan, Republic of China 70
DAR-CHIN RAU

Introduction 70
Vocational education 71
Vocational training 74
Stakeholders in education and training 78
Consensus and action 81
Policies for the future 82
Conclusion 84

5 Developmental corporatism and the process of change in vocational education and training: the Singaporean experience 86
JOHNNY SUNG

The VET system in Singapore 87
Developmental corporatism and the consensus process in Singapore 91
Appendix 5.1 Reformed educational system (1991) 99
Appendix 5.2 The composition of CPTE 100

6 Change and consensus in vocational education and training: the case of the German 'dual system' 103
WILLI BRAND

Selected key factors in the demand for change 103
The basic structure of VET in Germany 105
Change in VET: the significance of training-ordinances 109

The role of stakeholders in the development of training-ordinances 111
Phase structure of training-ordinance development 113
Deficiencies of the development of training-ordinances 118
Relevant deficiencies of the dual system 120

7 Process owners and stakeholders in VET reforms in Finland 123
OLLI RÄTY

Historical perspectives 123
The 'great reform' of vocational education of 1970s and 1980s 124
The multilevel planning as a precursor to decentralisation 127
Beyond the great reform: reforms since 1988 128
Who were the process owners and the stakeholders in the great reform? 131
The goals of the great reform 133
Outcomes of the great reform 135

8 The process of change in vocational education and training in the United States 137
BETSY BRAND

Introduction 137
Vocational education and training in the United States 137
Who are the major stakeholders? 138
How are stakeholders involved in the process of change? 143
What is consensus and how is it achieved? 149
Epilogue 153
Consensus in the United States and other countries 154

9 The process of change in vocational education and training: the South African experience 156
IAN BELLIS

The earlier context 156
Some developments relating to VET since 1990 159
The nature and shape of vocational education and training 161
Change processes – policy processes 162
The bases of the change processes 164
Consensus then – consensus now! 169
The present situation 176

Index 179

ILLUSTRATIONS

Figures

1.1	The relationships between major VET stakeholders	6
1.2	Simple model of consensus-based change	10
1.3	Venn diagram illustrating consensus	12
1.4	The ever-widening spiral of stakeholders	15
1.5	Levels of activity for planning and progress	15
3.1	Post-compulsory education options in the Republic of Ireland	61
4.1	Percentages of trainees by categories of training centre (1994)	75
4.2	The process of policy-making during the negotiation period (1990–)	79
4.3	The process of policy-making during the centralisation period (1950–79)	80
4.4	The process of policy-making during the consultation period (1980–90)	80
5.1	The framework of general corporatism	94
5.2	The process of change in the VET system	95
6.1	Unemployment and GDP growth statistics (1992–7)	105
6.2	The basic structure of the dual system	108
6.3	The two partners in the dual system	110
6.4	The four stakeholders in VET policy-making	112
6.5	Stages of the development of training-ordinances	114
6.6	Steering-relations in the dual system	119
7.1	Implementation of the VET reform	125
7.2	Structure of education after VET reform	127
7.3	The multilevel planning process	128
7.4	Government proposal for the future structure of education	129
7.5	Division of an age group by percentage entering different education institutions	135
9.1	Principles for the integration of education and training – the NQF	167
9.2	Proposed structure for an NQF	170–1

9.3 Processes towards documentation 174

Tables

1.1 Examples of stakeholders 7
4.1 Number of technological and vocational schools in 1996 72
4.2 Taiwan's economic and social progress indices (1952–94) 73
4.3 Taiwan's computer-related products (1995) 76
6.1 Unemployment and GDP growth statistics (1992–7) 104
8.1 Spheres of influence of stakeholder groups 142
9.1 Descriptions of the change/policy process 166