

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	ix

PART ONE

Modern Poetry Is Prose (But It Is Saying Plenty) Lawrence Ferlinghetti	3
Imaginary Cities: America Joyce Carol Oates	11
City Limits, Village Values: Concepts of the Neighborhood in Black Fiction Toni Morrison	35
Poetry and the Modern City Stephen Spender	45
The Poet and the City: Robert Lowell Helen Vendler	51
The Puzzle of Anti-Urbanism in Classic American Literature Leo Marx	63
New York from Melville to Mailer Alfred Kazin	81
Cities of Mind, Urban Words: The Dematerialization of Metropolis in Contemporary American Fiction Ihab Hassan	93
Mythicizing the City Leslie Fiedler	113
Theater and Cities Richard Eder	123

PART TWO

The Language of the Streets James Baldwin	133
---	-----

Black Literature and the Afro-American Nation:

The Urban Voice

Amiri Baraka 139

✕ Culture Confrontation in Urban America:

A Writer's Beginnings

Chaim Potok 161

A Double Life: The Fate of the Urban Ethnic

Jerre Mangione 169

The City and I

Pedro Juan Soto 185

Living with Change

David Ignatow 193

✕ The City as Battleground: The Novelist as Combatant

Marge Piercy 209

The Child's Perception of the City

Bruno Bettelheim 219

Borrowing and Lending: The Young Reader and the Library

Joan N. Burstyn 233

Literature for Youth: The City as Heaven and/or Hell

M. Jerry Weiss 239

A People's Paper for the Inner City

John Holt 245

Notes on the Authors 253