

CONTENTS

- spectacle: (n) 1. A specially prepared or elaborately prearranged display of a public nature designed to impress or entertain by its mass, proportions, or other dramatic quality
2. (n) a thing exhibited or set before the public gaze as remarkable
3. (pl) a means of seeing, a device for assisting defective vision

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: Riding without Horses—A Reading of the 1980s 1

1. Reading Ringside: Joyce Carol Oates, You Must Remember This 34
2. Strange Gods before Us: John Irving, A Prayer for Owen Meany 62
3. A Necessary Time to Bolt: Reynolds Price, Kate Vaiden 90
4. "The Twin-Peaked Glory of Bothness": William Kennedy, Quinn's Book 116
5. Speaking the Language of Brightness: Robert Ferro, Second Son 143
6. "That Sudden Shock of Sunshine and Birdsong": Anne Tyler, Breathing Lessons 168
7. In the Jaws of the (S)napping Turtle: T. Coraghessan Boyle, World's End 197
8. Humming the (In)sufficient Heart Out: Richard Powers, The Gold Bug Variations 223

Conclusion: The Gift of Spectacle(s)—(En)closing the Reagan Era 251

Appendix: Selected Works of Spectacle Realism, 1981–91 263

Notes 266

Bibliography 276

Index 285