

Table of contents

Acknowledgments	VII
Contributors	IX
Abbreviations used in glosses	X
1. L2 acquisition of tense-aspect morphology Rafael Salaberry & Yasuhiro Shirai	1
2. The first language acquisition of tense and aspect: A review Richard Weist	21
3. The dimensions of pastness Roger Andersen	79
4. Temporal relations in learner varieties: Grammaticalization and discourse construction Colette Noyau	107
5. Analyzing aspect Kathleen Bardovi-Harlig	129
6. The development of tense-aspect in English as a second language and the variable influence of inherent aspect Alex Housen	155
7. The aspect hypothesis in naturalistic L2 acquisition: What uninflected and non-target-like verb forms in early interlanguage tell us Andreas Rohde	199
8. How do learners acquire the classical three categories of temporality? Evidence from L2 Italian Anna Giacalone-Ramat	221
9. Lexical aspect in child second language acquisition of temporal morphology: A bidirectional study Sonia Rocca	249
10. Information structure in dialogic future plans: A study of Italian native speakers and Swedish preadvanced and advanced learners of Italian Eva Wiberg	285

11. Reference to past events in dialogue: The acquisition of tense and aspect by advanced learners of French	323
Maria Kihlstedt
12. On viewpoint aspect interpretation and its L2 acquisition: A UG perspective	363
Roumyana Slabakova & Silvina Montrul
13. Tense and aspect in the selection of Spanish past tense verbal morphology	397
Rafael Salaberry
14. The acquisition and use of perfective aspect in Mandarin	417
Patricia Duff & Duanduan Li
15. The prototype hypothesis of tense-aspect acquisition in second language	455
Yasuhiro Shirai
Index of names	479
Index of subjects	483