

Contents

Illustrations	ii
Abbreviations	iii
Preface and acknowledgements	iv
Chapter 1: Ports of trade: behavioural and material characteristics	1
Al Mina, lady of many guises	1
Interpretations of Al Mina	1
Ports of trade in the ancient world	3
Models in Classical Archaeology	3
A typology of ports of trade	4
Chapter 2: Al Mina as a port of trade	11
The political status of Al Mina	11
Material characteristics of Al Mina	11
Kriterienbündeln: conclusions	21
The institutionalisation of Al Mina as a port of trade	21
Chapter 3: Evidence for Greek residence at Al Mina	23
The architecture	23
Writing	24
Pottery	24
Features of Greek Geometric finewares at Al Mina	27
Phoenicians at Al Mina?	28
Warehouses at Al Mina?	29
Conclusions	30
Chapter 4: Greek Geometric pottery in the Levant	31
A catalogue of Greek Geometric pottery in the Levant	31
Findspots of Greek Geometric pottery	36
Greek Geometric pottery in Cyprus	42
Chapter 5: Geometric pottery in Greek-Levantine trade	45
Feasting in Early Iron Age Greece and the Levant	47
Some rituals of Early Iron Age diplomacy	49
The kula analogy	50
Participants in ancient xenía	50
Forms of Greek Geometric pottery in the Levant	53
The end of the line: Euboea	56
Appendix: The many ceramic characters of Pithekoussai	61
Finewares	61
Coarsewares	63
Trade amphorae	63
Conclusions	64
Bibliographic abbreviations	65
Bibliography	67
Index	80