

Contents

List of Plates	ix
Acknowledgements	x
1 Tantalizing Portions: Serialized Sensation Novels and Family Magazines	1
The 'sensation' formula	4
Serialization	10
Family magazines and their readers	14
All The Year Round	22
Once A Week	28
The Cornhill	31
The New Monthly Magazine	34
2 Wilkie Collins's The Woman in White in All The Year Round	38
Preaching to the nerves	38
The essential thing is to keep moving: Collins's narrative strategies	39
Strange family stories	41
Life in danger: sensationalizing health and safety	43
Self-help and helping yourself: the rise of the gentleman criminal	50
Interchangeable figures: criminals, detectives and spies	54
3 Ellen Wood's East Lynne in the New Monthly Magazine	60
East Lynne and its readers	60
Women's writing in the New Monthly Magazine	62
The professional woman writer	64
Bourgeois fantasies of ascendancy	66
Idle and ideal men and women	69
Ouida's Granville de Vigne	74
The maternity debate	76
The bigamy theme	79
4 Charles Dickens's Great Expectations in All The Year Round	83
Dickens: novelist as editor	83
Seizing a place in the economy of nature: discussions of natural selection in All The Year Round	84

We were unhealthy and unsafe	87
'So contaminated did I feel': Great Expectations and the problem of origins	91
Wolf-men	93
Problematic parentage	95
5 Wilkie Collins's No Name in All The Year Round	98
Representing the female outsider	98
Holding converse with monstrosities: reviews of No Name	100
Out of the house of bondage	102
Magazine serialization and literary red herrings	106
From the harem to the convent	107
Working women	111
6 Mary Elizabeth Braddon's Eleanor's Victory in Once A Week	114
Validating the sensation novel	114
The value of Dutch-metal and spangles: Braddon's defence of sensationalism	117
Eleanor's Victory : a labyrinth of textuality	121
Once A Week : foregrounding fictionality	125
7 Charles Reade's Very Hard Cash in All The Year Round	132
Reade's 'Matter-of-Fact' romance	132
The problems of perpetual suspense	135
From magazine serial to book: Reade's revisions	140
8 Wilkie Collins's Armadale in The Cornhill Magazine	145
Generic collisions in The Cornhill	145
Realism and sensationalism	148
Dual heroines	150
Fairytale, secrets, and lies	153
Containing and exploiting sensationalism	158
Illustrating the sensational	161
Conclusion: Victorian Novels and the Periodical Press	166
Appendix	169
Endnotes	170
Bibliography	188
Index	196