Contents

1 Introduction: The Special Security of Some "I" Talk 1

The Distinctive Security of Avowals 2
Avowals: Semantic Continuity and Epistemic Asymmetry 6
The Distinctive Security of Avowals and Privileged Self-Knowledge 11
Avowals' Security and Self-Knowledge: Some Conditions of Adequacy 15
The Plan of this Book 21
Some Terminological Preliminaries 24

2 Using "I" 'as Subject': Cartesian Reference or No Reference? 27

The Use of "I" 'as Object' versus 'as Subject' 27
Cartesian Egos as the Targets of Reference for "I" 29
The Wittgensteinian Rejection of Private Sensations 37
Getting Rid of Cartesian Egos: The 'No Reference' Thesis 46

3 "I"-Ascriptions: The Semantic and the Epistemic 55

Immunity to Error through Misidentification 56
Reference Without Identification: Demonstratives 60
Reference Without Identification: "I" 67
The Guaranteed Referential Success of "I" 71
How "I" Refers—An Indexical Account 77
"I"-Ascriptions: The Semantic and the Epistemic 82
Avowals as Immune to Error through Misidentification 89

4 The Epistemic Approach to Avowals' Security: Introspection and Transparency 93

Security through Introspection? 95
Avowals' Security as Due to 'Transparency-to-the-World' 104
Evans's Transparency View as an Epistemic View 111
Against the Epistemic Approach in General 122
Transparency-to-the-World and the 'First-Person Perspective' 128
The Limits of Transparency 131

5 Content Externalism, Skepticism, and the Recognitional Conception of Self-Knowledge 147

External-Content Skepticism Meets External-World Skepticism 149
Is Externalism Compatible with Self-Knowledge? 157
Content Self-Knowledge and the Recognitional Conception 169
A Non-Epistemic Alternative to the Recognitional Conception: Davidson's Line 173
The Recognitional Conception of Ordinary Self-Knowledge 179

6 The Distinctive Security of Avowals: Ascriptive Immunity to Error 188

Beyond Security in Content Assignment 189
Ascriptive Security as a Species of Immunity to Error 192
Ascriptive Immunity to Error: Epistemic Asymmetry and Semantic Continuity 200
The Security of Self-Verifying "I"-Ascriptions: Referring to Content by Articulating It 207
Articulating Content as a Way of Expressing One's Intentional State 212
Ascriptive Immunity to Error and the Expressive Character of Avowals 221

7 Avowals: 'Grammar' and Expression 226

Avowals as Expressive Acts, Take I: The Simple Expressivist Account 228
The Simple Expressivist Account versus Ethical Expressivism 233
Avowals as Expressive Acts, Take II: A Neo-Expressivist Account 240
Avowals as Acts and as Products 251
Natural Expressions as 'Transparent-to-the-Subject's-Condition' 264

8 Avowals: Expression, Content, and Truth 285

The Beginnings of Mental Talk: From Natural Expressions to Avowals 286
Beyond Beginnings: Linguistic Expressions 292
Avowals as Expressive of Judgments 304
The Asymmetric Presumption of Truth and Transparency-to-the-Subject's-Condition 310
Expressive Failures 320
Ascriptive Immunity, the Presumption of Truth, and First-Person Privilege 336

9 Speaking My Mind: Expression, Truth, and Self-Knowledge 340

Secure Avowals and Self-Knowledge 341
Self-Knowledge: A Deflationary View 346
No Cognitive Achievement 350
Knowing What Mental State You Are In 355
Expression, Self-Knowledge, and the JTB Model 361
The Low Road to Self-Knowledge 369
The High Road to Self-Knowledge 373
A Middle Road to Self-Knowledge 381
Avowable Self-Knowledge: A Synthesis 388

10 Speaking My Mind: Grammar, Epistemology, and (Some) Ontology 397

Neo-Expressivism Meets the Desiderata 398
Speaking My Mind: Expression and Reality 410
Some Concluding Remarks 426

Bibliography 429
Index 439