

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	iv
ABBREVIATIONS AND TECHNICAL TERMS	v
CHAPTER I. INTRODUCTION: AIM, OUTLINE AND SETTING OF THE STUDY	1
Background And Motivation	1
Scope and Setting	1
The scope	1
The setting	1
Outline of the Study	2
Catalogue of LH IIIA-B graves in the central areas of Mycenaean mainland	5
CHAPTER II. THE CULT OF THE DEAD IN MYCENAEAN GREECE: THEORETICAL DISCUSSION AND FRAMEWORK	13
Understanding and Defining Sacred Ritual in the Archaeological Record	13
Definition and functions of ritual activity	13
The archaeological recognition of ritual activity	14
Ancestor cults: definition, general characteristics and functions	14
The cult of the dead in the Mycenaean world: the problem	16
History of research	16
A sacred place of the dead: Architectural arrangement and ritual experience in Grave Circle A at Mycenae	19
A brief narrative of Grave Circle A's 'historical development'	20
The original appearance of the monument	20
The LH IIIB modification	21
Schliemann's altar: a matter of controversy since 1876	21
The Power of Ancestors: Death, Religion and Politics at LH IIIB Mycenae	24
The Atreus Treasury and the Tholos of Clytemnestra	25
The Cult Centre at Mycenae	26
Grave Circle A: a special locus for congregations?	28
'He who has nothing old has nothing new': some further concluding thoughts on the symbolic manipulation of the sacred and ancestral geographies of LH IIIB Mycenae	30
The Mycenaean cult of the dead as ritual action: a new approach to the operation of belief	30
CHAPTER III. MYCENAEAN AFTERLIFE AND SYMBOLISM	33
Symbolic art and death in Mycenaean Greece: An introductory framework	33
An approach to the study of past symbolism	34
Psyche and the hereafter	34
Allegories of psyche in Late Helladic funerary art: the archaeological evidence	35
Late Helladic examples of winged apparitions	35
Late Minoan III examples: a comparison	35
A fresco of chthonic nature from the Cult Centre at Mycenae	36
Birds	38
Birds on Late Helladic III sarcophagi	39
'Καινοφανή ειδώλια' and other bird models	39
Butterflies and the notion of psychostasia	40
'To the House of Hades': Mycenaean deathscape and symbolism	43
'To the Elysian plain and the bounds of the earth': The journey of the soul to the Mycenaean underworld	43
The offering of boats and chariots to the dead	43
Earlier examples	43
The Mycenaean evidence	44
The otherworldly voyage of the Mycenaean soul: the iconographical evidence	46
The sarcophagi iconography	46
Tomb carvings	48
By boat, chariots or wings: concluding thoughts on the voyage of the soul to the Mycenaean underworld	48
'to the mead of asphodel, where the spirits dwell': Visions of the Mycenaean underworld	49
Mythological creatures	49
Palm trees	51

Religious icons: the deposition of figurines in Mycenaean tombs	52
Anthropomorphic figures and figurines in Mycenaean sacred and domestic contexts: a summary of their function and meaning	52
Religious icons for the dead: a re-assessment of previous studies on their function and meaning	52
Through the eyes of Hera: an investigation of the religious function and symbolic/eschatological meaning of figures and figurines in Mycenaean tombs	54
Multiple figurines	54
Seated figurines, empty thrones and the cult of the dead	55
Large figures, θεοφορία and Mycenaean funerary cult	57
The iconography of death: learning about death and afterlife in Late Helladic times	58
CHAPTER IV. MYCENAEAN FUNERARY LANDSCAPES, TOMB DESIGN AND SYMBOLISM	60
Introduction	60
The location of Mycenaean funerary landscapes vis-à-vis the settlement	60
Cemetery orientation and symbolism	61
The symbolic significance of life-giving water in Mycenaean death	62
The abodes of the dead: tomb design, ritual and symbolism	63
Houses for the gods in Mycenaean Greece	63
The 'holy triad' of Mycenaean funerary architecture: dromos, stomion and chamber	64
Liminality, rites of passage and the sanctity of funerary ritual: a brief account	64
The symbolic function of the tombs' dromos	65
The ritual significance of the stomion	66
Decorated façades and wall paintings in Mycenaean chamber tombs	67
Elaborate cult buildings and tholos tombs	67
The iconography of Mycenaean chamber tombs: description, distribution, dating and artistic comparanda	68
Grooves	70
The symbolism of the chamber	71
Benches	72
Side chambers	73
Final thoughts on funerary landscapes, architectures of death and symbolism in Mycenaean times	74
Table IV.I: Catalogue of side chambers, benches and grooves mentioned in the text	76
Table IV.II: Catalogue of benches mentioned in the text	79
CHAPTER V. RITUAL ACTION AND THE MYCENAEAN CULT OF THE DEAD	82
Ritual activity as performance in the context of Mycenaean religious practice	82
Feasting with the ancestors: Libation and Sacrifice in Mycenaean tombs	82
Feasting with the gods in Mycenaean Greece	83
Libation rituals and drinking ceremonies	83
Sacrificial rituals and banqueting in Mycenaean sanctuaries	85
‘The souls are nourished by libations’: Libation rituals and drinking ceremonies in Mycenaean tombs	87
The significance of drinking vessels in the dromos and the stomion of Mycenaean tombs	88
Drinking and pouring ceremonies within the burial chamber: the archaeological evidence	91
‘...and around it poured a libation to all the dead...’: concluding remarks on the significance and purpose of libation rituals and drinking ceremonies in the Mycenaean cult of the dead	93
The occurrence of drinking vessels and pottery associated with liquids in the funerary contexts of the central areas of the Mycenaean dominion	94
The Linear B ‘dipsioi’ and the offering of oil to the dead	97
Animal sacrifice and banqueting in Mycenaean funerary contexts	98
Animal sacrifice in LH IIIA-B funerary contexts	99
Animal sacrifice and the iconography of death	99
Blood rituals and the connection between libation and sacrifice	101
Animal sacrifice in the Mycenaean funerary agenda: An account of the material evidence and of the previous arguments	102
Animal figurines, altars and sacrificial tables in Mycenaean tombs	104
Dying for the dead: were the Mycenaeans performing human sacrifice in honour of their ancestors?	105
po-re-na and the performance of human sacrifice in Mycenaean religious contexts	105
A new proposal on the interpretation of ‘porena’	108
The archaeological evidence for human sacrifice in Mycenaean funerary locales	110
Secondary burial rites and the cult of the dead in Mycenaean times	112
Secondary burial rites before the Mycenaeans: a brief account	113

Secondary burial treatment in LH IIIA-B: a concise description of the practice and the archaeological evidence	113
Tracing the absent dead: removal and ‘cenotaphs’ in Mycenaean funerary locales	115
What may the remains of secondary burial treatment say about the Mycenaean attitude towards death?	117
Fire rituals and burnt offerings	120
Commemorative rites and feasting in honour of the dead in LH IIIA-B times	123
Tomb markers in Mycenaean tholos and chamber tombs	123
Feasting and commemorative meals	124
Funerary games and the cult of the dead in Mycenaean times	125
Sacred places of the dead: The case of the Dendra ‘Cenotaph’	127
Breaking the tomb’s silence: Ritual action and the Mycenaean cult of the dead	129
Renfrew’s ‘Deductive System’ and the Mycenaean cult of the dead	129
From individual to ancestor in Mycenaean cultic activity	132
Table V. 1. Animal figurines in the cemeteries of the central areas of the Mycenaean dominion	133
CHAPTER VI. AN EPILOGUE TO THE MYCENAEAN CULT OF THE DEAD	135
The elites, the gods and the ancestors in Mycenaean society	135
A Theoretical Framework	135
EMyc Greece: a state in process	136
The evidence from LH IIIA-B Greece	137
The creation, transformation and continuity of traditions related to the cult of the dead in Mycenaean society	137
BIBLIOGRAPHY	141
LIST OF MAPS AND FIGURES	167
MAPS	172
FIGURES	177