

“HUMAN POTENTIALITIES” is a series focused on the writings of Aldous Huxley, his ideas and their cultural context, comprising a wide range of different fields: the natural sciences, sociology, psychology, economics, politics, ecology, art, religion, philosophy, not to mention critique of utopian thought. Not confined to monographs on the literary significance of Aldous Huxley, the series presents an interdisciplinary forum that aims to establish a dialogue between literary scholarship and other disciplines.