

Table of Contents

Abbreviations	xv
Introduction	1
I. Literary Presuppositions for Reading the Epistle to the Hebrews	9
A. The Literary Genre of the Epistle to the Hebrews	9
1. The Epistolary Character of Hebrews	9
2. The Rhetorical Character of Hebrews	16
3. Relationship of Hebrews with the Christian Preaching	17
4. Expository and Paraenetic Material in Hebrews	19
5. Hebrews: A “Discursive” Christian Pastoral Writing	22
B. The Literary Structure of the Epistle to the Hebrews	26
1. The Study of the Literary Structure of Hebrews	28
2. The Content-Oriented Proposals	30
3. The Form-Oriented Proposals	30
4. The Adopted Structure: A Letter with a Body of Three Major Parts	31
II. Linguistic Analysis of Temporal Categories in the Epistle to the Hebrews	41
A. Semantic of Time in the Epistle to the Hebrews	41
B. The Category of Time and the Opposition between the Past and the Present Age	43
1. The Temporal Opposition between the Former Age and the Last Days	43
a. Temporal Antithesis within the Structure of Heb 1,1-4	43
b. The Past Age of the Community (1,1)	46
c. The Eschatological Period (1,2)	48
d. Note on the Translation of the Temporal Indicators πάλαι and ἐπ’ ἐσχάτου τῶν ἡμερῶν τούτων	51
e. The Eschatological Reader/Listener	52
f. Conclusion	53
2. The Temporal Opposition between the Ages of the First and the New Covenant	54
a. The Time of the First Covenant (8,7)	54
b. The Time of the New Covenant (8,13)	55
c. Note on the Translation of the Adjectives νέος and καινός	60
d. The Reader/Listener of the New Age	61
e. Conclusion	61

3. The Temporal Opposition between the Age of the First Tent and the Present Age	62
a. The Present Kairos (9,9)	62
b. The Kairos of the Right Order (9,10)	70
c. Note on the Translation of the Temporal Syntagms ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐνεστώς and καιρὸς διορθώσεως	74
d. The Reader/Listener as Worshipper in the Present Age	75
e. Conclusion	75
4. On the Concept of World Ages	76
a. The Created Temporal World (1,2)	76
b. The Visible Temporal World (11,3)	78
c. Note on the Translation of the Lexeme αἰῶνες	80
d. Conclusion .	80
C. The Category of Time and the Opposition between the Motives of Uniqueness and Repeatability	81
1. The Illumination Once Occurred	81
a. The Opposition between the Unique Event of Illumination and the Repeatability of its Renewal (6,4.6)	81
b. The Illumination and the Christological Event (6,6)	84
c. Note on the Translation of the lexeme ἀπαξ in 6,4	85
d. Awareness of the Unique Event by the Reader/Listener	85
e. Conclusion	86
2. The Sacrifice Once Offered	86
a. The Semantic Opposition between Repeatability and Uniqueness in the Structure of 7,26-28	86
b. The Repeatability of the Sacrifices of the Levitical Priesthood (7,27a-d)	87
c. Temporal Uniqueness of the Offering of Christ (7,27e)	89
d. Note on the Translation of the Lexeme ἐφάπαξ	91
e. Reader/Listener Defined by a Unique Offering of the Past	92
f. Conclusion	92
3. The Uniqueness of the Entering of Christ into the Shrine	93
a. The Temporal Opposition between the Repeated Entering of the Priests and the Unique Entering of Christ (9,12)	93
b. Internal Temporal Constitution of the Unique Event in 9,12: Offering, Entering, Redeeming	95
c. The Unique Event and the Efficacy of the Blood of Christ	99
d. The Opposition between Repeatability of the Entering of the Levitical High Priest and the Unique Revelation of Christ in the Heavenly Shrine (9,25-26)	100
e. Internal Temporal Constitution of the Unique Event in 9,25-26:

Entering, Passion, Offering, Revelation	108
f. The Unique Event in the Heavenly Place	109
g. Note on the Translation of the Lexemes ἀπαξ and πολλάκις in 9,25-28	111
h. A Revelation for the Reader/Listener	111
i. Conclusion	112
4. The Unique Event of the Saints	113
a. Those Once Purified (10,2)	113
b. Those Once Sanctified (10,10)	117
c. Those Once Brought to Completion (10,11-12.14)	120
d. The Definitive Forgiveness (10,18)	123
e. Internal Temporal Constitution of the Event of the Saints	125
f. Note on the Translation of the Lexeme μία and the Syntagm εἰς τὸ διηνεκές in Hebrews 10	127
g. Personalization of the Christological Event	128
h. Conclusion	128
D. The Category of Time and the Opposition between the Motives of Permanency and Transitoriness	129
1. The Permanent Status of the Son	130
a. Temporal Motives in the Structure of 1,5-14	130
b. The Permanent Royal Dominance of the Son (1,8)	131
c. The Permanent Identity of the Son (1,10-12)	136
d. Note on the Translation of the Syntagm εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα τοῦ αἰῶνος	139
e. The Eternal Christ as Permanent Reference for the Reader/Listener	139
f. Conclusion	140
2. Permanency and Priesthood of Jesus	140
a. The Motive of Permanency in Ps 109,4b (5,6)	140
b. Permanence of the Priesthood of Melchizedek (7,3)	142
c. The Opposition between Life and Death (7,8)	146
d. The Endless Life of Jesus and his Permanent Priesthood (7,16)	147
e. Immutability of the Permanent Priesthood of Jesus (7,21.24)	152
f. The Permanent Completion of the Son (7,28)	157
g. Note on the Translation of the syntagm εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα	158
h. Present Priesthood of Jesus for the Reader/Listener	159
i. Conclusion	159
3. Permanency of the Kingdom	160
a. Time of the Movable (12,26-27a)	160
b. Time of the Unmovable (12,27b-28)	164

c. The Divine Permanency Shared by the Reader/Listener	168
d. Conclusion	168
4. The Permanent Identity of Jesus Christ	169
a. The Christological Affirmation (13,8)	169
b. Semantic Opposition to the Concept of Unfaithfulness (13,7,9)	173
c. Mortal Reader/Listener in Relationship with the Eternal Jesus Christ	173
d. Conclusion	174
E. The Category of Time and the Opposition between the Present and the Future Age	174
1. The Temporal Opposition between the "Today" and the Sabbatical Age	174
a. "Today" of Hearing God's Word (3,7)	174
b. "Today" of Reciprocal Encouragement (3,13)	179
c. "Today" of the Promise (4,7)	182
d. The Eschatological Sabbatical Age (4,9)	186
e. Note on the Translation of the Lexeme σαββατισμός	191
f. Eschatological Tension towards the Future of the Reader/Listener	192
g. Conclusion	192
2. The Temporal Opposition between the Transitory Cities and the Future City	193
a. The Opposition between Two Cities (13,14)	193
b. The Future City	199
1. The City Expected by the Patriarchs (11,16)	199
2. The Heavenly Jerusalem (12,22)	202
c. The Function of 13,14 in the Argumentation of 13,7-19	205
d. Reader/Listener: Citizen of the Future City	208
e. Conclusion	208
3. Note on the Role of the Parousia and the Eternal Judgment in the Temporal Opposition between the Present and the Future Age	209
III. Hermeneutics of Time in the Epistle to the Hebrews	213
A. Temporal Framework of the Discourse	213
1. The Basic Four Temporal Oppositions in Hebrews	213
2. Relationship between the Basic Temporal Oppositions	214
a. The Past Age and the Eschatological Present	214
b. The Eschatological Present and the Eschatological Future	216
3. Relationship between the Temporal Oppositions and the Category of Space	219
4. Human Existence and Theology of Time	221

B. Actualization of the Temporal Framework of the Epistle to the Hebrews	222
1. On the Concept of Actualization	222
2. Condition of Possibility for the Actualization of the Temporal Framework of Hebrews	224
3. Orientations for an Actualization of the Temporal Oppositions in Hebrews	224
a. Our Present time begun about 2,000 years ago	224
b. Living Memory of the Unique Event of Christ	225
c. Contemporariness with Jesus Christ	226
d. The “Today” and the “Future” as Theological Existential Categories	227
General Conclusion	229
Bibliography	231
Index of Definitions of Terms	255
Index of the Lexical Field of Time in Hebrews	259
Index of Delimited Structural Literary Units	263
Index of Biblical Texts	267
Index of Ancient Literature (Other Than Biblical)	285
Index of Authors	289