

Contents

Preface and acknowledgements vii

Introduction: an overview of modern Italian literature 1

PART I The Long Eighteenth Century (1690–1815)

- 1 Cross-currents of modernity 13
 - 1.1 This is Arcadia 13
 - 1.2 New states, new thinkers 21
- 2 Enlightenment and the public arena 28
 - 2.1 Journalism, theatre and the book trade in Venice 28
 - 2.2 Enlightenment and reform from Naples to Milan 34
- 3 Literature and revolution 45
 - 3.1 Italy and France 45
 - 3.2 Alfieri: life and drama 51
 - 3.3 Foscolo: between classicism and romanticism 58

PART II Literature and Unification (1816–1900)

- 4 Romantic Italy 67
 - 4.1 Milan 1816 67
 - 4.2 Florence 1827 72
 - 4.3 Leopardi: the challenge of poetry 77
- 5 Writing the nation 87
 - 5.1 Manzoni: the responsibility of the writer 87
 - 5.2 History and fiction 92
 - 5.3 Literature and the people 99
 - 5.4 Memory, monuments and the national past 106
- 6 Making the nation 113
 - 6.1 The literary culture of Unification 113

- 6.2 The artist as observer: verismo and the social 119
6.3 Domesticity and the literary market 124

PART III From Modernism to the Market (1900 to the Present)

- 7 Modernism and the crisis of the literary subject 135
7.1 The search for identity 135
7.2 War, technology and the arts 143
7.3 Narratives of selfhood: the subjective turn in fiction 150
- 8 Literature, Fascism and anti-Fascism 159
8.1 Writing and the regime 159
8.2 The social condition of intellectuals 165
8.3 Testing the limits of the novel 170
8.4 Resistance, Reconstruction and neo-realism 180
- 9 From the avant-garde to the market-place 188
9.1 The last avant-garde? 188
9.2 The widening of culture 195
9.3 A minimalist postmodernism: the poetics of attention 202
9.4 Epilogue: a weekend in April 209

References 215

Further reading 220

Index 223