

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction. Fiction and the Fictitious: Reading the Money Economy	1
1 'Kiss, Kiss, Bang, Bang': Money and the Thriller	12
Introduction. Money in the Twentieth Century	12
I From the Gold Standard to the EuroDollar: H. G. Wells's Tono Bungay and Ian Fleming's Goldfinger	13
II Crime and Casino Capitalism: Paul Erdman's The Billion             Dollar Sure Thing and Jocelyn Davey's A Treasury Alarm	24
2 Sound Money: Thatcher, Gender and the State	40
Introduction. The Emergence of Sado-monetarism	40
I Taking the Maggie: Martin Amis's Money and Malcolm Bradbury's Rates of Exchange	44
II The Taboo: Margaret Drabble's The Radiant Way and Fay Weldon's Darcy's Utopia	58
3 Bang, Boom, Bust: The Fortune of the City	70
Introduction. Making a Killing	70
I The Monkey and the Trader: Raymond Williams's Loyalties and David Lodge's Nice Work	74
II Revision and Retrospect: Jonathan Coe's What a Carve Up! and Alan Hollinghurst's The Line of Beauty	80
4 Rogue Traders: Popular Fiction and the Professional	97
Introduction. The Men Who Broke the Bank	97
I Bonds and Novels: the Professional and the Thriller	100
II Free to Trade: The Creation of the Market	106
III Genre and Critique: Don DeLillo's Cosmopolis	114

5	Women, Work and Risk	123
	Introduction. The Gender Quake	123
	I Bridget Goes Banking: Femininity and Finance in Popular Fiction	129
	II Trading on Feminine Ethics: Lesley Campbell's Forged Metal	137
	Conclusion: The Unknown Unknowns	142
	Bibliography	147
	Index	159