

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Abbreviations.....	9
I Introduction	11
II Theoretical Background and Key Concepts of the Study.....	25
Time as a Historical and Cultural Concept: A Historical Outline of Western Time-Thought	25
Theories of the Modern Novel and the Relation between Time and the Novel.....	31
A Brief Overview of the Reception and the Research Tradition of Defoe's Novels.....	48
III Adventure-Time, Autobiographical Time and Narrative Structure	63
Adventures and Episodes	63
Adventure-Time and Autobiographical Time Representing a Cyclical Idea of History	82
IV Christian Views of Time	95
Spiritual Autobiography and the Characters' Spiritual Awakening.....	95
The End of Time: The Fear of Moral Decay and of the End of the World	113
V Chronology and Calendar Time	129
Particular Time.....	129
Temporal References and Duration.....	137

VI	Time as an Organiser of Everyday Life	159
	The Functions of the Watch and Clock-Time	159
	Clock-Time, Narration and Everyday Time in Robinson Crusoe	178
VII	Gendered Time.....	193
	Gendered Views on the Time System of Western Society	193
	Future Expectations and Biological Time	201
	Criticism of the Institution of Marriage and ‘Masculine’, Linear Time in Moll Flanders and Roxana	210
	Towards the Time Orientation of the Nuclear Family	217
VIII	Time as an Economic and Cultural Value.....	229
	Economic Thinking and Colonialism: The Novel Form and Defoe’s Non-Fiction.....	229
	Economic Individualism and Capitalistic Time System in Defoe’s Novels.....	239
	The ‘Great Chain of Being’ representing Cultural Otherness.....	261
IX	Conclusion: Defoe’s Novels between the Pre-Modern and Modern Novel and Pre-Modern and Modern Conceptions of Time	277
	Bibliography	285
	Index of Names.....	307