

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction: Cinema and the Affective-Performative	1
From representation to performance	4
Deleuze and performance: the affective-expressive event	7
Genre and the affective-performative	13
Trajectory	17
1 Animated Fetishes	26
Ruling out expression: feminist theories of spectacle and performativity	31
Imitation of Life	38
Upward thrust: ideal abstraction	38
Downward thrust: anomalous repetition	40
Sadomasochism, a shock to thought	47
Written on the Wind : lethal powers of the fetish	51
The Tarnished Angels : Bakhtinian carnivalesque as Deleuzian affective shock	55
2 Choreographies of Affect	67
Fassbinder's Brechtian aesthetics: in the realm of the emotions	70
Between Brecht and Artaud: The Marriage of Maria Braun	76
Zones of affect: psychoanalysis, melodrama, trauma	77
"Der Hermann Ist Tot," or how Maria began to move	80
Frame and performance: dancing in Oedipal enclosures	85
Cruel performance: The Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant	89
Performance: an intensive kind of theatre	89
Words that "strike a pose"	91
Bits and pieces of bodies	95
The frame and the open: the moving tableau	97
Petra's narcissism, the film's self-affection	101
Cruelty as love	102

3 Dancing Feminisms	113
Thriller : counter-narcissistic performance	117
“Redefining melodrama for our times”	118
Disciplining the body	120
Affective/conductive powers of the voice	125
The thrill of tango: Potter’s narcissistic performance	129
From Rage to dance	131
Powers and capacities	133
Lessons on narcissism	135
Actions and passions	138
4 Kinesthetic Seductions	148
Nénette and Boni : a disorder of the senses	150
Beau Travail : performing the narrative of seduction	155
Friday Night : a line of flight against all odds	165
Let the film love you	174
5 Powers of the False	178
Affective contagion	181
An affective unconscious: asymmetrical resonances	188
Creative forgers	194
At the limits of genre	199
Conclusion: Everything Is “Yes”	208
Works Cited	218
Index	228