

Contents

Preface by General Editor	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Notes on the Contributors	xii
Introduction	1
Stephen Hutchings
Part I Russia Represents the Other	25
1 Scant Sign of Thaw: Fear and Anxiety in the Representation of Foreigners in the Soviet Films of the Khrushchev Years	27
Julian Graffy
2 'The Italians are Coming!' Italy and the 'Other' in Soviet Cinema	47
David Gillespie
3 In the Cuckoo's Nest: From a Postcolonial Wondertale to a Post-Authoritarian Parable	62
Mark Lipovetsky
4 Sokurov's Russian Ark : Reflections on the Russia/Europe Theme	77
Isabelle de Keghel
5 The New American Other in Post-Soviet Russian Cinema	95
Seth Graham
Part II The Other Represents Russia	111
6 Lost in Translation? Early Soviet Sound Film Abroad	113
Jeremy Hicks
7 Cinema Thinking the Unthinkable: Cold War Film and the Non-Reality of Russia	130
Irina Sandomirskaja

8	Bilingualism, Miscegenation and Incest in East/West and Indochine : Russia's Place in the French Postcolonial Imagination Stephen Hutchings	148
9	Through the 'Other' Lens? Russians on the Global Screen Birgit Beumers	166
10	Russian Marital Migrants in Contemporary Film Karin Sarsenov	184
11	Angel, Avenger or Trickster? The 'Second-World Man' as the Other and the Self Mark Lipovetsky and Daniil Leiderman	199
	Conclusion Stephen Hutchings	220
	Select Bibliography	226
	Index	233