

Nostalgia in VOGUE

2000-2010

EDITED BY EVE MACSWEENEY

RIZZOLI
NEW YORK

New York Paris London Milan

CONTENTS

- 11 FOREWORD by Anna Wintour
- 12 INTRODUCTION by Eve MacSweeney
- 14 THE HEIR AND ASTAIRE
A grassed-over swimming pool in Ireland inspired artist T. J. Wilcox to explore the forgotten life of 1920s It girl Adele Astaire
- 18 THE ART OF LIVING
A young Marie Brenner took cues from three rebellious aunts and their friendship with Frida Kahlo to gain a measure of independence
- 22 SWEPT AWAY
Young and in love, Patricia Morrisroe moved into her boyfriend's Sutton Place apartment only to have her visions of a romantic summer subsumed by a family drama
- 24 SCOOP DREAMS
Back when the soda fountain was the place to be, Francine du Plessix Gray recalls the erotic undertones of a bygone teenage ritual
- 28 GUISE AND DOLLS
Edmund White evokes the postwar Paris of his youthful dreams and the woman who came to embody it
- 32 THE GODFATHER
In order to fully know his father, Adam Green had to get to know his father's best friend, the legendary Leonard Bernstein
- 36 REAR WINDOW
When Thisbe Nissen and her family moved house, they found Vladimir Horowitz and Wanda Toscanini right next door. And so began mysterious sightings and strange encounters with their musical neighbors
- 38 THE ONE WHO SMILED
Mary Blume recalls her friendship with Balenciaga's premiere vendeuse, who gave her the confidence to wear the designer's curiously demanding clothes
- 42 THE MOVING IMAGE
In his boyhood home in Germany, Karl Lagerfeld came across an Irving Penn photograph of a Balenciaga dress. It unleashed in him a powerful sense of mystique and possibility
- 46 SALAD DAYS
Were the seeds of female liberation sown in the kitchen? Betty Fussell remembers the dreams, the dinner parties, and the dress that defined the postwar period
- 50 WHEN HATS HAD NAMES
Musician Patti Smith describes how she stumbled into a cultural wonderland of capeskin gloves, grouse hunting, and lunch with Erich von Stroheim
- 54 RHYME AND REASON
Tamasin Day-Lewis's father, poet laureate Cecil Day-Lewis, died when she was a teenager. This portrait, by Irving Penn, reminds her of everything she knew about him—and reveals much that she didn't
- 58 LIVING IT UP
At 21, Jonathan Van Meter was drawn to the high-rolling glamour of the Rat Pack and its unsung impresario, Skinny D'Amato
- 62 A STITCH IN TIME
Finding the perfect dress was never an easy task—until Margaret Atwood took matters into her own hands
- 66 PREPPY DREAMS
As a California freshman at Yale, Ann Packer tried and tried to emulate East Coast style. Eventually she discovered her own
- 70 THE BEST OF EVERYTHING
For the young Mary Gordon, Suzy Parker was the epitome of womanhood: confident, glamorous, smiling. Then came the sixties
- 74 A SMOLDERING POWER
Long before he made the foot a woman's sexiest feature, Manolo Blahnik found inspiration on the silver screen
- 77 ISLAND GIRL
When Susanna Moore arrived from Hawaii for a job at Bergdorf Goodman with trunks full of Norman Norell hand-me-downs, she took on a mysterious identity
- 80 TURNING POINT
Just days after graduating from Berkeley, Joan Didion went to work at Vogue. Here she recalls a sitting whose subtle undercurrents caused her to change direction

- 84 BREAKING THE SPELL
A. M. Homes's fascination with Mick Jagger began in her teens. Three decades later, she's still talking about the ultimate midnight rambler
- 88 A BACKWARD GLANCE
Elizabeth Kendall relives the moment—and the Marimekko dress—that changed her life forever
- 92 A SIZABLE AURA
When Wayne Koestenbaum first saw Barbra Streisand in Vogue, he learned that less can be more with fashion, but never with superstars
- 98 THE GIFT
Writer James Salter remembers passing an hour with the time-obsessed, yet timeless, Vladimir Nabokov
- 102 SNAP, CRACKLE, POP!
Short skirts, colored tights... no one had ever seen such things before. The originator, Mary Quant, looks back in ardor
- 108 A COLLECTOR'S CHUTZPAH
Barbara Heizer on the heyday of Ethel Scull, a sixties pioneer of mixing fashion with a big dose of art
- 114 IN SEARCH OF LOST TIME
An assignment transports Mary Tannen to 1960s Los Angeles and one summer's fateful events that drew a decade, and her carefree youth, to a close
- 118 MAGAZINE PARADISO
During his childhood in small-town Pennsylvania, Bruce Weber collected images that spoke to him of a muscular, otherworldly glamour
- 124 THE DADDY OF COOL
As a boy growing up in 1960s Beverly Hills, Bruce Wagner knew James Coburn was the Man
- 128 A DOER, A CHANGER
In 1968, Richard Avedon's portrayal of Janis Joplin's savage stylishness awakened in Elaine Showalter a new sense of feminine liberation
- 132 "WERE WE EVER THAT NEW?"
When she was adrift and bereaved in the late 1960s, Vogue endorsed Anjelica Huston's unconventional beauty and launched her modeling career
- 137 HIGH HOPES
The concept was liberating; the reality was anything but. Teri Agins relives the age of the Afro
- 140 ON THE FLY
Working as a waitress at Max's Kansas City in the late sixties, Joan Silber floated among the stars of art and rock
- 144 A FRESH TAKE ON BEAUTY
Before she became an international star, Ali MacGraw was a shy teenager mesmerized by the patrician models of Vogue
- 150 A HISTORY OF VIOLENCE
What did it mean to be youthful and passionate in 1970? Joyce Carol Oates remembers a quiet New York morning, a photo shoot, and its tragic, terror-filled end
- 154 LIVING OUT LOUD
The international glamour of Vogue's lifestyle stories in the early seventies gave the American public a shot in the arm. Jewelry designer Kenneth Jay Lane witnessed the revolution
- 160 ON THE BRINK
Right before she released a best-selling album, met James Taylor, and became a singing sensation, Carly Simon did her first magazine shoot for Vogue
- 164 THE GANG WAS ALL THERE
George Plimpton recalls the gamblers, the brawlers, and the Pulitzer Prize-winning writers who made Elaine's the city's most famous late-night literary hangout
- 168 ALL THE TRIMMINGS
New to Manhattan with a wedding to plan, Kennedy Fraser discovered a grand bridal outfit in Diana Vreeland's last issue of Vogue
- 172 LINE BY LINE
In early-1970s Paris, Lydia Davis encountered an eccentric world of poets and artists and the discipline to follow her own path
- 176 MODEL MAVERICK
Devon O'Brien became the unlikely muse to legendary couturière Pauline Trigère in 1980s New York
- 180 TOTAL EXPOSURE
Decades after Richard Avedon snapped a portrait of her nineteen-year-old heartbroken self, Joyce Maynard stumbled upon the image and saw the true picture

- 184 RUNAWAY SPIRIT
Like Faye Dunaway's defiant heroines, writer Paul Greenberg's mother was stylish, impulsive, and always on the move
- 188 FACE OF CHANGE
Beverly Johnson recalls the landmark magazine cover that transformed her life—and fashion history
- 192 RIDING HIGH
In 1974 Peter Bogdanovich was living with Cybill Shepherd, the stunning star of his upcoming film Daisy Miller. He had the world on a string—or so he thought
- 196 RECKLESS ABANDON
She wasn't just a girl in a tub: For Dirk Wittenborn, Chris von Wangenheim's sultry nude summarized everything he wanted
- 200 HOUSE RULES
In 1992, the legendary decorator Sister Parish opened her home in Maine to Christopher Petkanas. It was a lesson in design he never forgot
- 204 PAINT IT RED
Jerry Hall's cool attitude and sexy pout turned young Australian Poppy King into an international lipstick whiz
- 208 LOUD AND CLEAR
A fledgling author in New Orleans, Valerie Martin found inspiration—and her next novel's heroine—in the singer Ronee Blakely
- 211 SOUNDS OF SILENCE
Placid expressions, brooding souls . . . in the seventies, Stacey D'Erasmus recalls, a passionate inner life became the source of women's independence
- 216 ON THIN ICE
In her early career as a fashion editor, Vera Wang applied the perfectionism she learned as a child skater to produce shoots with a sharp edge
- 220 BELLE ÉPOQUE
Designer Bella Freud remembers how the unlikely twosome of punk and Catherine Deneuve first opened her eyes to fashion's thrillingly subversive charms
- 224 BOY WONDER
At thirteen, he headed out on the town in top hat and tuxedo on the arm of a Vogue cover girl. Thomas Beller looks back on life as a New York City kid
- 228 A FINE BALANCE
A photograph of a struggling young woman reminds Kennedy Fraser of being single and adrift in Manhattan in the 1980s
- 232 THE ACTOR AMONG US
John Burnham Schwartz recalls the summer when his parents' divorce, through Dustin Hoffman's shrewd tenacity, became fodder for Kramer vs. Kramer
- 238 FEAST YOUR EYES
America's insatiable appetite for strange, slimy creatures prompts Jeffrey Steingarten to revisit a time when even he was afraid to eat exotically
- 242 DROP-DEAD DECADENCE
With his sexy, jet-set aesthetic, Helmut Newton inspired a young Mario Testino in his fearless embrace of fast living
- 248 HIGH MEETS LOW
Israeli-born model Michaela Bercu posed for Vogue in a couture jacket with jeans, little knowing the impact it would have
- 252 MATERIAL GIRLS
The government was corrupt and crumbling, but the men were handsome and rich. Andrea Lee remembers the romance of one of Italy's most decadent decades
- 256 FLIRTING WITH DISASTER
At the age of fourteen, Sophie Dahl heard Nirvana for the first time and spent a year seduced by the siren song of grunge
- 262 AN EXOTIC TALE
From the land of Genghis Khan to a favored perch in Irving Penn's studio, Siberian model Irina Pantaeva tells her story
- 266 STREET LIFE
In 1995, Helmut Lang decided that his future lay in the sidewalks of New York, not the boulevards of Paris
- 270 A LIGHT TOUCH
Art director Charles Churchward recalls photographer Herb Ritts's easygoing brilliance
- 276 THE MIGHTY PENN
The late, great artist and photographer's long-term fashion editor, Phyllis Posnick, remembers Irving Penn's studio as a place of rigor, charm, and laughter
- 284 PHOTOGRAPHY CREDITS
- 286 ACKNOWLEDGMENTS