

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgements	XI-XIII
A Note on Translation	XV-XVI
Abbreviations	XVII-XVIII

Introduction	1-33
------------------------	------

Part One: Approaching the Monologion

1. The Monologion and Augustine's De trinitate	37-91
1. Introduction
2. The Monologion : Between Lanfranc and Augustine
3. The Content and the Form: Beyond Monastic Lectio
4. Augustine's De trinitate and Medieval Theological Formation
5. De trinitate 15 and the Method of the Monologion
6. Conclusion
2. Anselm's Greek Formula: A Pseudo-Augustinian Gloss	93-147
1. Introduction
2. Anselm, Boethius, and Individuation
3. The Monologion , Letter 83, and the Epistola de incarnatione Verbi
4. Persons and Substances: Three What?
5. A Common Nature and the Problem of Individuation
6. Augustinus Testatur : Letter 204
7. Conclusion: Anselm's Pseudo-Augustine

Part Two: A Reading of the Monologion

3. Anselm's Three Ways	151-208
1. Introduction
2. An Invitation to Inquiry: Reason as Guide
3. The Good: Beyond Utility and Intrinsic Worth

4. The Nature of Existence and the Degrees of Dignity
 5. Excursus: Anselm's Three Ways and Aquinas's Five Ways
 6. Conclusion
4. De nihilo nihil: The Craftsman and the Supreme Utterance 209–262
1. Introduction
 2. Plato, Augustine, and Anselm's "Creator"
 3. Creatio ex nihilo and the Craftsman
 4. De nihilo nihil and the Semantics of "Nothing"
 5. The Supreme Nature and its Utterance
 6. Concepts and Primary Substances
 7. Conclusion
5. Creator Spiritus Simpliciter 263–301
1. Introduction
 2. On Predication: Substances and Relations
 3. Truth, Eternity, and Timelessness
 4. The Ratio of Time and Place
 5. Boethius, Anselm, and Eternity
 6. Spiritus Simpliciter
 7. Conclusion
6. Trinity and Mind 303–384
1. Introduction
 2. Trinitarian Simplicity: To Speak of the Ineffable
 3. Trinity, Imperfection, and the Human Mind
 4. Trinity and Reason
 5. Imitation, Dissimilarity, and Equivocation
 6. The Mind and Its Utterance
 7. Sex, Gender, and Trinitarian Difference
 8. A Common Nature: Reconsiderations
 9. Anselm's Trinitarian Analogies
 10. Conclusion
7. The Criterion of Rationality: On Faith, the Ineffable, and the Love of the Good 385–440
1. Introduction

2. De trinitate Book 13: The Book of Faith
3. Anselm's Defense of His Method: A Preliminary Assessment
4. Language, the Limits of Reason, and the Understanding of Faith
5. The Mind, the Soul, and the Criterion of Rationality
6. Love, the Will, and the Indifferent Soul
7. On Naming God: The Trinitarian Good
8. Conclusion

Conclusion	441–453
Epilogue	455–460
Bibliography	461–485
Indexes	487–497