

Table of Contents

List of Illustrations	xv
Abbreviations	xxiv
1. Introduction	1
Writing the history of French archaeology	1
Traces of the Germanic legacy in France	3
National archaeology in the nineteenth century	11
Reception of the archaeological profession	23
PART ONE: ARCHAEOLOGICAL RESEARCH IN NINETEENTH-CENTURY FRANCE
2. Centralizing Archaeological Research in     Nineteenth-Century France	33
Studying the national past from a provincial perspective	33
Accounting for France's antiquities from 1810 to the 1840s	35
Initiatives of the Comité des travaux historiques from the mid-nineteenth century	48
3. Learned Societies and Archaeological Research in     Nineteenth-Century France	59
Contextualizing provincial antiquarian societies	59
Rules and regulations	62
The mechanics of learned societies	67
Financial considerations and budgets	77
PART TWO: THE POLITICS OF MEROVINGIAN ARCHAEOLOGY
4. Developing Approaches to Merovingian Archaeology	91
Serendipitous discoveries of Merovingian cemeteries	91
Launching a nineteenth-century excavation	100
Standardizing excavations and documenting antiquities	109
Spreading the gospel of archaeological methodology	125
Methodological advances in the nineteenth century	135

5. The Politics of Merovingian-Period Finds	145
Archaeological particularism and regional identity	145
Frankish finds in Lorraine and Normandy	149
Rediscovering the Burgundian and Visigothic ancestors of the French	154
Early medieval craniometry and racial ancestry	167
The age of synthesis: mapping the big picture	178
6. Institutionalizing the Amateur's Craft	189
Studying the Merovingian monuments of France	189
Corresponding on archaeology	200
Archaeological education and the formation of a scientific discipline	207
Signs of distinction: what makes an archaeologist professional?	217
7. Archaeological Museums, Merovingian Antiquities,     and their Audiences	237
Assembling and displaying private collections	237
Regional archaeology museums	248
A national home for antiquities at Saint-Germain-en-Laye	264
Defining the role of the Musée des antiquités nationales	274
The Expositions universelles and the commodification of archaeology	288
8. Public Reception of Merovingian-Period Finds	299
Popularizing archaeology: newspapers and illustrated magazines	299
Nos ancêtres les Gaulois? Historians debate the origins of France in the Revue des deux mondes	311
Artistic imaginings of the première race	322
Merovingians in the primary and secondary school curriculum: Founders of France or les rois fainéants?	335
9. Epilogue	351
Merovingian archaeology on the eve of World War I and afterwards	351
Selected Bibliography	367
Manuscript sources	367
Printed and electronic sources	369
Index	409