

Contents

	page
Acknowledgements/Woord Vooraf	xi
Preface	xiii
PART ONE: INTRODUCTION
Chapter 1 Faulkner Criticism
1.1. Introduction: the multifarious art of criticism	1
1.2. Faulkner's early reception	4
1.3. The major critics	8
Chapter 2 Compassion
2.1. Controversy and complexity	21
2.2. The author's view	26
2.3. The Nobel Prize Address	28
Chapter 3 Aims, Methods, Terminology
X 3.1. Reception studies and reception theory	33
X 3.2. Jauss's communicative aesthetic experience	35
X 3.3. Iser's "indeterminacy" and "implied reader"	37
X 3.4. Link's "author" and "reader" categories	40
X 3.5. The problem of "adequate realisations" and misreception	42
X 3.6. Terminology: consistency building, ideation, background-foreground relations, perspectives, strategies, theme	44

PART TWO: THE APPRENTICE NOVELS

Chapter 4 Soldiers' Pay

4.1. Outline	49
4.2. Aims and anticipations	50
4.3. The moribund airman	51
4.4. A jaundiced eye	52
4.5. Faulkner's wars	54
4.6. Compassionate perspectives	56
4.7. Faun, nymph and satyr	61
4.8. The members of the wedding	64
4.9. Final vision	66
4.10. Faulkner's romanticism	68
4.11. Betrayal	70
4.12. The grieving father	71
4.13. That unfortunate virgin	72
4.14. Attraction and rejection	74
4.15. Despair	76
4.16. Summing up	78

Chapter 5 Mosquitoes

5.1. Outline	83
5.2. Aims and anticipations	84
5.3. His principal butt	85
5.4. The faun as artist	87
5.5. The unattainable nymph	88
5.6. Rejection and despair	90
5.7. Fairchild's tale	92
5.8. Concluding remarks: Faulkner as a satirist	94

Chapter 6 Sartoris

6.1. Outline	99
6.2. Aims and anticipations	100
6.3. Tragic heroes	101
6.4. Various perspectives of a doomed young man	103
6.5. The pity of war	107
6.6. Romantic longing and despair	108
6.7. The last fauns and nymphs	110

6.8. Maturation	110
6.9. Miss Jenny's compassion	111
6.10. Stylistic strategies	115
6.11. Compassion in Sartoris	116
6.12. Concluding remarks: compassion in the apprentice novels	118

PART THREE: THE SOUND AND THE FURY

Chapter 7 Introduction

7.1. The first major work	125
7.2. An astonishing gap	126

Chapter 8 A Tale Told by an Idiot

✕ 8.1. Obscurity	129
8.2. The function of the first ten pages	130
✕ 8.3. Sharing the idiot's view	131
8.4. The search for security	133
✕ 8.5. Past and present	135
8.6. The effect of the first ten pages	136
8.7. Increasing complexity	136
8.8. The Compson family	138
8.9. Caddy	140
8.10. Pity and compassion	145
8.11. Reading and misreading the text: concluding remarks	146

Chapter 9 A Walking Shadow

9.1. Narrative complexity and context	153
9.2. Repetition and difference	155
9.3. "Father said"	159
9.4. A greater tragedy	167
9.5. A tragic hero?	171
9.6. From apprentice to master	174
9.7. Envy and despair	174
9.8. Appendix: a writer's response	180

Chapter 10 A Poor Player

10.1. A new mode of identification	185
10.2. Swimming at Harvard	187
10.3. Once a bitch	190
10.4. Caddy's surrender and defeat	193
10.5. Compassion for a devil	197

Chapter 11 All Our Yesterdays

11.1. Distancing	203
11.2. Doom and decay--the indomitable skeleton	207
11.3. Two Southern ladies	209
11.4. Caddy	213
11.5. The empty centre	216
11.6. Caddy's absence in "Dilsey's section"	217
11.7. "Dis long time, Jesus"	219
11.8. Shegog's vision	223
11.9. Jason defeated	227
11.10. Conclusion: progression and expansion	234

PART FOUR: AS I LAY DYING and LIGHT IN AUGUST

Chapter 12 Introduction 249

Chapter 13 As I Lay Dying

13.1. A tour de force	253
13.2. Duality	256
13.3. Lack and loss	258
13.4. Darl's madness	259
X 13.5. Multiple perspectives	264
13.6. The reason for living	265
13.7. A country girl	269
13.8. Faulkner's social criticism	270

Chapter 14 Light in August

14.1. A conventional narrative	275
14.2. Lena's story: light and harmony	277
14.3. Identification and participation	279
14.4. Moving backwards	284
14.5. Successive perspectives	286
14.6. Uncertain identity	294
14.7. Fear and nausea	296
14.8. Madness	300
14.9. Manhood	302
14.10. The cycle of violence	306
14.11. The circle of history and heritage	308
14.12. Closure and unity	310

Chapter 15 Conclusion 321

Works Cited 329

Primary Sources 335

Samenvatting 337