

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Social strategies and their role in the production of housing 1

PART I - Theoretical Framework

Chapter 1- Re-conceptualization of “social” housing 9

1.1 Why social housing?	10
1.1.1 What is social housing?	10
1.1.2 Social housing in Europe, its origins	11
1.2 The meaning of housing	13
1.3 The “social” dimension of housing	16
1.3.1 Social capital	19
1.3.2 Social production of the habitat	23
1.4 Conceptual framework and methodology	26
1.4.1 Case study research and construction of typologies	27
1.4.2 Typology construction and typology attributes	27
1.5 Principles from the “social” dimension of housing as typology attributes	28
1.5.1 Social organization: general classification	28
1. Individual	28
2. Traditional communitarian	29
3. Collective	30
1.5.2 Social organization: production of housing	31
1. Self-management	31
2. Mutual aid	32
3. Collective property or collective ownership	37
1.5.3 Social economy	38
1.5.4 The right to the city: socio-spatial organization	41
1. Urban centralities and the right to the city	42
2. Public space and the right to the city	43
3. Urban morphology and the right to the city	45
4. The right to the city and the politico-legal framework	48
1.6 Selection of case studies	50
1.6.1 The context of Latin America, social organizations and housing	50
1.6.2 Case studies	52
1.6.3 Documentation and analysis	53
1. Documentation	53
2. Analysis	54
3. Evaluation	55
4. Generalization of the case studies	55
1.7 Final considerations	55

Chapter 2- Social movements and urban development in Latin America 57

2.1 The economic system and social movements in the Latin American background	57
2.2 Transformation of social and economic structures: early twentieth century (pre-World War II)	61
2.2.1 Changes in social structures	65
1. Modern society	65
2. Traditional pre-capitalist social structures: the countryside	67
2.2.2 Changes in urban structures: housing the poor, and the informal city	69
2.3 The new economic systems and the shape of the new city: early twentieth century (post-World War II)	73
2.3.1 The feeling for revolution and the Alliance for Progress	74
2.3.2 Loans and incidence in urban plans: the divide between the formal and the informal city	77
1. New urban planning	78
2. Informal settlements and self-organization	80

2.3.3 Informal economy	83
2.3.4 Emergence of other types of social organizations	85
1. Protest movements: from protest to proposals	85
2. NGOs and their role of in popular housing development	86
2.4 The neoliberal crisis and the new social movements (late 1980s to present)	87
2.4.1 Economic measures influencing change	88
2.4.2 Neoliberalism in Argentina and new ways of reclaiming the right to the city	90
2.5 Final considerations	94

Chapter 3- Social housing typologies in Latin America 97

3.1 Background and overview: housing approaches with negative aspects	98
3.1.1 Publicly built housing	98
3.1.2 Privately built social housing	101
3.2 The Modern Architecture Movement	106
3.2.1 Modern Movement and slum eradication	108
3.2.2 The Modern Movement typologies	109
Typology 1 - The Neighborhood Unit: hygienists and the first approach to density	109
Example: Neighborhood Unit N°3 - Lima (Unidad Vecinal N° 3) - 1945–1948	112
Typology 2 - The High-rise approach to urban renewal	117
Example: “23 de Enero” - Caracas, Venezuela - 1955	119
Typology 3 - New generation of Neighborhood Unit: another approach to density	126
3.3 John F. Turner ideology and the “Barriada”	128
Typology 4 - The “Barriada Asistida” or sites and services approach	132
1. The “Barriadas Convencionales” conventional shantytowns or barriadas	134
Example: “Ciudad de Dios” Lima - 1954	134
2. The “Barriadas Planificadas y Asistidas” or sites and services	135
Example: “Huascar,” Lima	136
3.4 The cooperative housing movement: housing by social movements	139
Typology 5 - Cooperative housing by mutual aid	141
Example: FUCVAM Uruguay - 1968 to present	142
3.5 Final considerations	150

PART II - Case Studies

Chapter 4- Social production of the habitat — individual and communitarian organization — Lima 153

4.1 Lima popular city’s development background	153
4.2 The housing deficit in Lima	159
4.3 Politics behind the process of city-making, and social housing in the popular city	164
4.3.1 From 1945 to 1962	164
1. “Corporación Nacional de la Vivienda” CNV (National Housing Corporation)	164
2. Origin of “Urbanizaciones Populares” (Popular Neighborhoods)	165
3. “Comisión Nacional para la Reforma Agraria y la Vivienda,” (CRAV)	166
4. Legal framework from 1961: Law 13517	167
4.3.2 Political context from 1963-1968, Fernando Belaúnde Terry	168
4.4 Case Study 1: PREVI the new generation of Neighborhood Units - social production of the habitat by individual organization	171
4.4.1 Background: the architecture competition	172
4.4.2 Background: the project	174
1. The goal of the project	175
4.4.3 The new approach, technology to reduce costs	176
1. Cost and financing	177
4.4.4 The social dimension: socio-spatial organization	178

1. Methodology and design characteristics	178
2. Individual housing production by scales	178
4.4.5 The social dimension: social organization	185
4.4.6 The social dimension: social economy	187
4.4.7 Challenges	189
4.5 Case Study 2: Villa el Salvador sites and services - social production of the habitat by communitarian organization	191
4.5.1 Political context from 1968 to 1975, Juan Velasco Alvarado	191
4.5.2 The social dimension: socio-spatial organization	192
1. Residential zone	193
2. Industrial zone	194
3. Farming zone	195
4. Street network	195
5. Process of consolidation of the urban fabric	195
4.5.3 The social dimension: social organization	200
1. Community projects	205
2. Tenure and land ownership in the first decades	207
3. Social organization after the crisis	208
4.5.4 The social dimension: Social economy	212
1. Productive units	212
2. The industrial park	213
4.5.5 Challenges	214
4.6 Lessons learned from the case studies	218
4.6.1 Lessons learned and moving beyond PREVI	218
4.6.2 Lessons learned from Villa El Salvador	221
4.7 Final considerations	223

Chapter 5 - Social production of the habitat — collective organization — Buenos Aires 227

5.1 Housing deficit in Buenos Aires	228
5.1.1 Informal renting	232
5.1.2 Occupation of vacant buildings and evictions	233
5.2 Housing policies	234
5.2.1 Legal framework supporting self-management housing process: Law 341/964	235
1. Transition housing program	238
2. Challenges of the law	238
5.3 Contemporary housing and social movements in Buenos Aires: the development of the new cooperative	239
5.3.1 “Movimiento de Ocupantes e Inquilinos” MOI (Occupant and Tenants Movement) and the housing cooperatives	242
1. Self-management	243
2. Mutual aid	243
3. Collective property	243
5.3.2 The “Movimiento Territorial de Liberación” MTL (Territorial Liberation Movement)	244
1. MTL structural organization and direct democracy	246
5.4 Case Study 3: “Monteagudo” housing project, cooperative housing, housing by social movements. Social production of the habitat through collective organization	248
5.4.1 The social dimension: Socio-spatial organization	249
1. Access to urban land (centrality)	249
2. Design and urban characteristics	252
3. Cost	255
5.4.2 Social dimension: social organization - EMETELE Cooperative	255
1. Self-management	257
2. Development of work values and capacity building	257
3. Democratic internal process, allocation of the dwellings	258
4. Tenure	259
5. Maintenance	259

5.4.3 The social dimension: Social economy	261
5.5 Challenges	261
5.6 Lessons learned from “Monteagudo”	264
5.7 Final considerations	266

Chapter 6 - The “social” dimension of “housing,” towards a collaborative approach 269

6.1 Conceiving a different approach to enable change	270
6.1.1 An alternative social housing framework	271
6.1.2 Social organization	271
6.1.3 Socio-spatial organization	275
6.1.4 Politico-legal framework	283
6.1.5 Resulting social economy during and after the process	285
6.2 Outlook	288

Bibliography 291