

contents

list of figures	ix
list of tables	x
acknowledgments	xi
1. introduction: contemporary cognitive media theory ted nannicelli and paul taberham	1
part one: the state of cognitive media theory: current views and issues	25
2. “the pit of naturalism”: neuroscience and the naturalized aesthetics of film murray smith	27
3. evolutionary film theory malcolm turvey	46
4. the geography of film viewing: what are the implications of cultural-cognitive differences for cognitive film theory? daniel barratt	62
part two: psychological research and media theory	83
5. audiovisual correspondences in sergei eisenstein’s alexander nevsky : a case study in viewer attention tim j. smith	85
6. engaged and detached film viewing: exploring film viewers’ emotional action readiness ed s. tan	106
7. coloring the animated world: exploring human color perception and preference through the animated film kaitlin l. brunick and james e. cutting	124

part three:
cognitive theory and media content	139
8. mood and ethics in narrative film	141
carl planting
9. effects of entertaining violence: a critical overview of the general aggression model	158
dirk eitzen
10. a general theory of comic entertainment: arousal, appraisal, and the PECMA flow	177
torben grodal
11. postcolonial humor, attachment, and yasujiro ozu's early summer	196
patrick colm hogan
12. avant-garde film in an evolutionary context	214
paul taberham part four:
cognitive theory and media forms	233
13. cognitive theory and the individual film: the case of rear window	235
william seeley and noël carroll
14. cognitive theory and video games	253
andreas gregersen
15. blinded by familiarity: partiality, morality, and engagement with television series	268
margrethe bruun vaage
16. coming out of the corner: the challenges of a broader media cognitivism	285
greg m. smith
bibliography	303
contributors	331
about the american film institute	335
index	337