

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction: Neo-Victorian Television: British Television Imagines the Nineteenth Century	1
1 Period Representation in Context: The Forsyte Saga on BBC and ITV	14
The 1967 adaptation of The Forsyte Saga	16
A response to the BBC classic serial?: the 2002 Granada Forsyte Saga	27
2 Victorian Fictions and Victorian Nightmares	49
Middlemarch : the knowledge of history	59
The Woman in White : alternative history as dark secret	68
North and South : subjectivity and memory	83
The classic novel adaptation, post-heritage	98
3 Murder Rooms and Servants: Original Drama as Metadaptation	103
Murder Rooms : between reality and myth	105
Lucy Gannon's Servants : modern Victorians	123
Murder Rooms and Servants : questioning format and genre	139
4 Real Victorians to Victorian Realities: Factual Television Programming and the Nineteenth Century	147
From The Victorian Kitchen Garden to What the Victorians Did for Us	149
Uncovering the Real Dickens : testimony of the Victorian age	159
The 1900 House : living as Victorians	175
Factual history television and the construction of the Victorian age	196
Conclusion: Victorian Facts, Victorian Fictions	201

viii Contents

Notes	209
Bibliography	215
Television Programmes and Films Cited	226
Index	229