

{ CONTENTS }

|   |             |
|---|-------------|
| Acknowledgments   | ix          |
| Illustrations   | xi          |
| An Invitation to Think about Contracts and Balance                               | xiii |
| The Evolutionary Perspective on Balance   | xxiv        |
| Where Does This Theory Fit within Other Literary Criticism?                             | xxvii       |
| 1. Embodiment and Its Entailments  | 1    |
| The Genres of Fictions as Niches  | 8           |
| Person to Person Broadens to Brains and Things  | 10          |
| Learning from Fictions  | 13          |
| Learning How to Use Fictions by Experiencing Them                                       | 16          |
| Meanings Are Overdetermined and Not Fixed   | 18          |
| Who Learns to Use Stories and Who Teaches?  | 21          |
| Moving from Individual Learning to Communal Understanding                               | 24          |
| 2. Lyrics and Their Frames   | 27   |
| “The Wanderer”  | 28          |
| Categorization: A First Approximation   | 32          |
| How Is Poetry Different and How the Same?   | 36          |
| How Medievalists Talk about It  | 39          |
| Prototyping: A Cognitive Description of Understanding Images                            | 41          |
| Framing and Exploration   | 45          |
| Memory  | 49          |
| How Does This Fit with Literary Theoretical Interests?                                  | 53          |
| Summary   | 54          |
| 3. Genre Change and Narrative Recovery (Maybe)                                   | 56   |
| Mind Reading as a Version of Categorization   | 62          |
| Narrative: Ballooning Claims, Lessons Learned   | 68          |
| Embodiment Again: Analogical Learning, Narrative as Nourishment                         | 70          |
| Learning to Produce Narrative Genres; Living with Gradient Judgments                    | 73          |
| The Suicide of Lucretia as a Representationally Hungry Problem                          | 76          |
| 4. Intelligence on a Communal Scale: An Enriched Theory of Distributed Cognition | 90   |
| Using the World   | 91          |
| Distributed Cognition   | 91          |
| Interventions, Benign or Malign?  | 94          |
| How Sacred Objects Work   | 101         |
| Faces   | 111         |

|   |     |            |
|---|-----|------------|
| Portrait Painting   | 114 |            |
| Teaching and Learning   | 125 |            |
| Change or Resistance  | 126 |            |
| 5. Distributed Misunderstanding  |     | 130 |
| Imaginative Literature Displays and EvokesReal Cognitive Performance              | 131 |            |
| How the Macbeths Mess Up  | 132 |            |
| The Contributions of Austin and Cavell  | 133 |            |
| Theory of Mind  | 138 |            |
| Metacognition and the Pressure of Time  | 143 |            |
| The Pieces are Coming Together  | 146 |            |
| The Relationship of Fictional to Real Brains  | 149 |            |
| Metacognition and Tragedy, The Soliloquy as Niche                                     | 150 |            |
| Distributed Cognition: How Far Does It Stretch?                                       | 153 |            |
| 6. Affording Justice through Sinderesis: An Early ModernEmbodiment Theory |     | 155 |
| The Commercial and Religious Contexts Demanding Change                                | 155 |            |
| The Equity Court and the Terms of the Debate: Conscience                              | 160 |            |
| Saint German's Solution: Sinderesis   | 167 |            |
| Fairness Is a Body Word, Justice An Abstraction                                       | 173 |            |
| 7. Balance and Imbalance   |     | 175 |
| Analogies in the Revenge Plays  | 178 |            |
| Madness, Chaos, Havoc   | 185 |            |
| Some of the Relevant Cognitive Theories   | 187 |            |
| Balance, or More Important, Imbalance   | 190 |            |
| The Looping Biological Evidence   | 196 |            |
| 8. The Skepticism of Grotesques: "Between the Knownand the Unknown"       |     | 198 |
| Grotesques as Expressions of Skepticism   | 200 |            |
| Unpredictable but Self-Regulating, without Precedent, Carnavalesque                   | 205 |            |
| The Theatrical Grotesques   | 208 |            |
| The Crucial Move: The Revenger Becomes the Director and the Judge                     | 214 |            |
| The Rage for Chaos  | 217 |            |
| Evidence That Disorder Gets the Job Done: Enzyme Catalysis                            | 221 |            |
| Cheating or Creativity?   | 223 |            |
| 9. Detach and Reuse  |     | 229 |
| The New Biology   | 233 |            |
| Gene Reserve  | 237 |            |
| Forces in Restraint of Free Trade   | 242 |            |
| The Next Questions  | 244 |            |
| References  |     | 249        |
| Index   |     | 269        |