

Contents

1	Introduction	1
Part I Friedrich Nietzsche: Madness and the Limits of Becoming
2	Nietzsche and Autobiographical Philosophy	15
3	Nietzsche's Intuitive Movement in a Labyrinth of Contradictions and Masks	49
4	Nietzsche and Madness	63
Part II Georges Bataille: Madness and the 'Ethics of Vulnerability'
5	Bataille and Autobiographical Philosophy	87
6	Heterogeneity, Inner Experience and the 'Ethics of Vulnerability'	105

7	Bataille and Madness	113
Part III Michel Foucault: Madness and Philosophical Incapacity
8	History of Madness: Is There Such a Thing as Madness?	137
9	Foucault and Autobiographical Philosophy	157
10	Foucault and Madness	171
Part IV Jacques Derrida: Philosophy Opens Up to Madness
11	The Debate: Derrida on Foucault via Descartes	187
12	Derrida and Madness	205
13	Derrida and Autobiographical Philosophy	215
Part V Responding to Madness: Autobiographical Philosophy
14	Post-Nietzschean Possibilities and Responsibilities	229
15	Being ‘in the Distance of Madness’	245
16	Conclusion	257
Appendix A		265
Appendix B		267
Appendix C		269
Bibliography		271
Index		277