

Contents

Avant-Propos — VII

Acknowledgments — IX

- 1 Introduction – Une dissymétrie s'évoque — 1
- 2 Kateb Yacine – Nedjma as Woman — 17
 - 2.1 Painful Beginnings — 19
 - 2.2 Mythical Interpretations — 25
 - 2.3 Masculine Perspectives on the Feminine Image: Desiring Objects — 33
 - 2.4 Rivalrous Relations — 40
 - 2.5 National Possibilities — 45
 - 2.6 Fragile Emancipation and Pessimistic Representation — 51
- 3 Mohammed Dib: From one Gender to an Other — 60
 - 3.1 Realist Plenitude and the Coming Revolution — 62
 - 3.2 Feminine Voices, Articulating Change — 74
 - 3.3 Gendered Frontiers — 81
 - 3.4 Maternal Melancholy — 84
 - 3.5 For whom the Texts? — 95
- 4 Mouloud Feraoun – Humility in the Representation of Women? — 100
 - 4.1 Masculinist Structures and Women's Participation — 102
 - 4.2 Breaking the Chain — 112
 - 4.3 Cacophonous Narration — 123
 - 4.4 Ventriloquism, Factitiousness, and Failure — 129
- 5 Mouloud Mammeri – A Dissenting Masculine Perspective — 135
 - 5.1 Kabyle Sociology, Masculinist Structures, and Women's Suffering — 137
 - 5.2 Lévi-Strauss, Matrimonial Strife, and Positive Change — 143
 - 5.3 Masculine Blindness, Perspective and Scopophilia — 149
 - 5.4 Supplements, Activity, and Pessimistic Uncertainty — 157

6	Assia Djébar – Movements Towards Self-reflexive Representation — 167
6.1	A Representative Scribe? — 172
6.2	Socio-historical Progression? — 177
6.3	Psychic/Subjective Progression and Emancipatory Learning — 183
6.4	Shattered Mirrors — 188
6.5	Ideological Evolution — 193
7	Conclusion – Women’s Postcolonial Representation — 200
8	Bibliography — 211
8.1	Primary Sources — 211
8.2	Secondary Sources — 212
	Name Index — 219
	Index of Theoretical Terms — 221